

CHAMBERS . . . delivers petition to Beermann, left.

Sen. Chambers Pledges Lively Governor's Race

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

With a promise to enliven the campaign between Democratic Gov. J. James Exon and Republican nominee Richard Marvel, Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha Wednesday apparently qualified as a petition candidate for governor.

Celebrating his 37th birthday, Chambers presented Secretary of State Allen Beermann with petitions which he said contained 2,950 signatures.

Attached was a receipt for a $250 filing fee which Chambers paid at the Douglas County Courthouse earlier in the day.

Needs 2,000

The petitions must contain at least 2,000 valid signatures of registered voters in Nebraska if Chambers is to win access to the general election ballot.

By presenting his petitions prior to the Friday implementation of a new election law enacted by the 1974 Legislature, Chambers will be able to gain a spot on the ballot without a lieutenant governor running mate.

If there are 2,000 valid signatures on the petitions,

Beermann said, he will affix Chambers' name to the ballot without a running mate even though Republican and Democratic nominees for governor and lieutenant governor will be running as a team.

Law Changes

Current state law does not provide for team election of petition candidates. As of Friday, the new law will require team petitions.

Chambers said the current campaign has centered on one theme: "Exon says, 'I'm right,' and Marvel says, 'No, you're wrong.'"

With him in the race, Chambers said, the campaign will confront such issues as "the high cost of living, the need for decent housing and medical services and why neither candidate has done anything to relieve tax problems."

Chambers said he not only opposes the sales tax on food purchases, but favors abolition of the sales tax altogether.

Outspoken Senator

A barber, now seeking a law degree from Creighton University in Omaha, Chambers has been a member of the Legislature since 1971. As a senator, he has been the Unicameral's most outspoken member on social issues.

Chambers urged voters to look at what issues concerned the three gubernatorial candidates before this year's campaign, rather than during it.

The record, he said, will show that he has been "more responsive to the needs of people."

His petitions, he said, contain signatures from various sections of the state, although "the bulk of them" were gathered in Omaha and Lincoln.

Most political speculation has guessed that Chambers will take more votes from Exon than he does from Marvel, thus indirectly assisting the Republican nominee.

But, Chambers said, he received no organized assistance from Republicans in gathering signatures.

He said, he is "not for or against Marvel or Exon. Let the chips fall where they may."

Chambers believes he may be the first black to seek major statewide office. He is also the first petition candidate for governor since 1956.

'Free Wheeling'

As a participant in joint appearances with Exon and Marvel, Chambers said he will attempt to "make the discussions as free wheeling and far ranging as possible."

"They're won't really debate until I'm part of them," he declared.

Chambers acknowledged that he has been a controversial public figure.

His friends, he said, see him as a "healing" influence. His enemies see him as destructive and irresponsible . . . but they don't call me stupid."

To his enemies, he said, he has become "a sort of folk villain."

Sen. Gurney Indicted

Jacksonville, Fla. (AP) — Sen. Edward J. Gurney, R-Fla., was indicted by a federal grand jury Wednesday on bribery, conspiracy and perjury charges. He was accused of taking part in a scheme to collect $233,000 in kickbacks from housing contractors.

He was the first sitting U.S. senator to be indicted in 50 years.

Six other persons were indicted on conspiracy charges along with the 60-year-old Gurney, a member of the Senate Watergate Committee and a candidate for re-election.

Gurney issued a statement in Washington saying, "I maintain my absolute innocence of any wrongdoing. I have an abiding faith in the American system of justice and firmly believe that I will be proved innocent of any wrongdoing in this affair."

The indictment, handed down here and announced by the Justice Department in Washington, said that the charges stemmed from an effort to raise funds in exchange for influencing the use of government housing and mortgage money. The senator also was accused of participating in covering up the scheme, defrauding the government and lying to the grand jury.

The secretary of the Senate said the last sitting senator to be indicted was Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who was accused of influence-peddling with the Interior Department in 1924.

Indicted with Gurney were his former administrative assistant, James L. Groot of Washington; Joseph Bastien, the former head of Gurney's Winter Park, Fla., field office; two Florida Republican party officials and two officials in the Florida offices of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Forty-two other persons were named as unindicted co-conspirators.

GURNEY . . . 'I'm innocent.'

Gurney is charged with one count of conspiracy, one count of bribery, one count of receiving unlawful compensation and four counts of making false declarations to a grand jury. If convicted on all counts, he faces a maximum 42 years in jail.

The indictment charged all six defendants with conspiring since December 1970 to raise funds for Gurney from building contractors and developers who deal with the Department of Housing and Urban Development in Washington.

In return for the contributions, HUD would be pressured to give favored treatment to those builders and developers in awarding contracts for government-sponsored housing and mortgage insurance, the indictment asserted.

The indictment listed 115 overt acts as part of the conspiracy and said $233,160 was paid by the unindicted co-conspirators either to a Gurney aide or to organizations linked to the senator.

The scheme allegedly was hatched at a January 1971 meeting at Gurney's home in Winter Park. At that meeting, the indictment said, Gurney, Groot, Bastien and the two Florida party officials, Earl M. Crittenden and George Anderson, discussed a fundraising operation and decided to hire Larry E. Williams to carry it out.

Williams pleaded guilty last February to federal charges of income tax evasion and aiding a former FHA official in accepting a bribe and was sentenced to one year in prison.

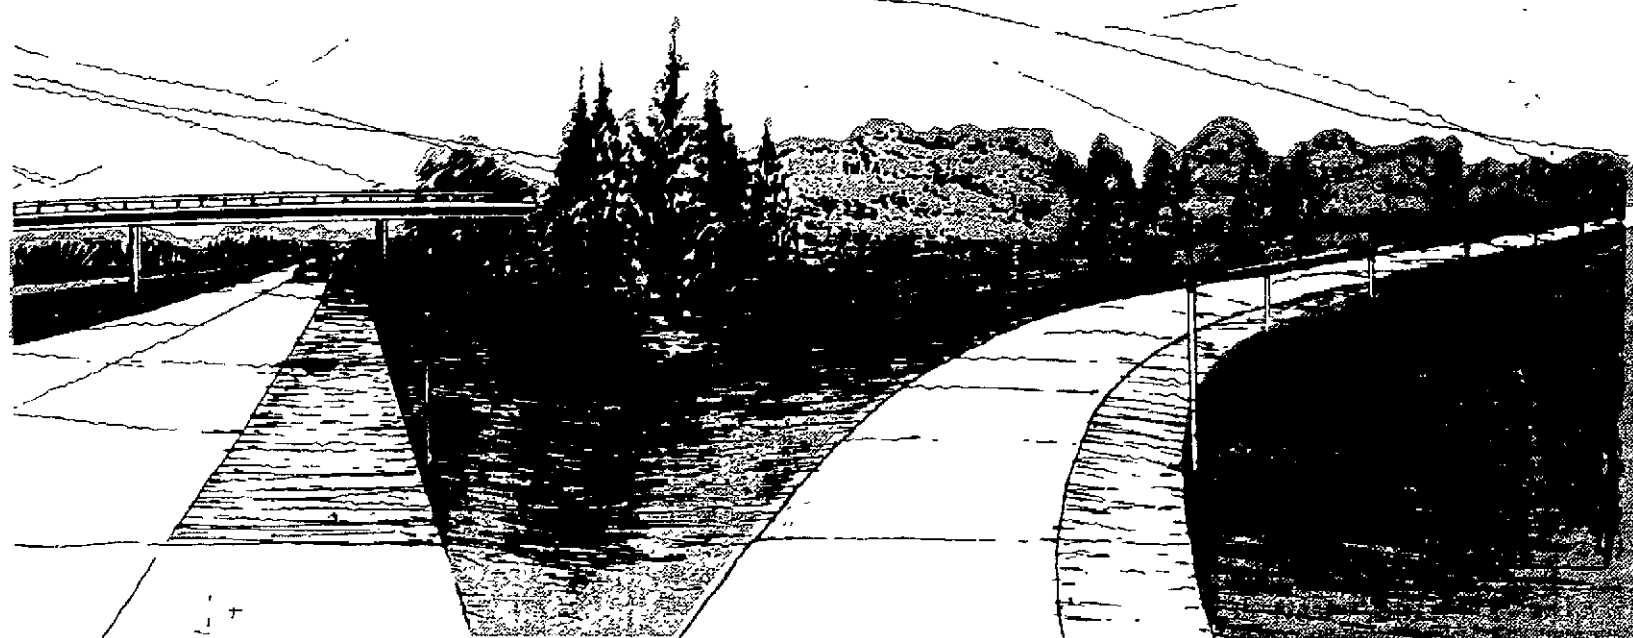

Gurney has denied any wrongdoing in connection with the fundraising operation, under investigation by the Justice Department, Internal Revenue Service and HUD.

As the allegations mounted, the senator went on statewide television in Florida last Dec. 6 and declared, "I have received nothing. I've made no personal gain."

He blamed Williams for using his name to extort money from Florida builders but conceded "it's true that I was careless and unobservant and too trusting."

Gurney, 60, served three terms in the House of Representatives before his election to the Senate in 1968.

During his service on the Watergate committee, he was considered a strong defender of President Nixon.

HIGHWAY LANDSCAPING . . . guides traffic by providing a directional element at interchanges.

'Every Plant Has A Purpose'

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

When Tommy Thompson tells people he landscapes Nebraska's highways, many tease him about being a modern-day Johnny Appleseed, wandering along roadsides scattering seeds to the winds.

Thompson laughs at the thought, but denies it 100%.

"Every tree, every flower, every plant is there for a purpose," he said. "Our job is to develop highway safety and esthetics as well as save money on maintenance."

Thompson heads the roadside development section within the State Highway Department. With the help of two other landscape architects and an agronomist, he designs all rest areas, highway landscaping projects and arranges all seeding, sodding and erosion control.

Limited To Interstate

Because of safety precautions, highway landscaping is pretty much limited to the interstate, he said.

A departmental policy stipulates no trees will be planted less than 50 feet from the edge of pavements in rural areas. A study by car manufacturers indicated that if a vehicle leaves the roadway, it will likely be back under control within 50 feet, "if ever," Thompson said.

Most older highways on the primary system have only 18 to 25 feet of right-of-way — not enough space for trees and a safety margin too.

"Basically, our job is to put back what the construction crews took out when they built the roads," Thompson said. And that's not always an easy task when dealing with native grasses, flowers and trees, many of which are not sold commercially.

Wouldn't Survive

Many plants available in nurseries "do quite well in urban environments" with protection and regular care, he said. But out along the highways, where they can't be pampered, many would never survive.

"In selecting plants, you have to pick the most supreme, hardy plant you can get," he said. From those he tries to select varieties that will blend in with Nebraska's grassland plains.

Since about 1965, right-of-ways have been seeded with a mixture of from 6 to 12 types of native grasses.

'Part Of Heritage'

"These grasses are part of Nebraska's heritage and besides, they give beautiful fall color," he said. They also adapt easily to Nebraska's harsh climate, develop deeper root systems for better erosion control, provide nesting areas and food for wildlife and help control noxious weeds.

Thompson said his department is trying to develop a similar program for native wildflowers.

"We're trying to find those striking in appearance as well as hardy enough to stand the weather," he said. About 35 species have been selected for study; already two types of gayfeather seeds are on the market in limited quantity.

Thompson pointed out that Nebraska was the first and maybe the only state to receive an award from the National Audubon Society "for combining principles of ecology and economy in highway landscaping."

Also Hides Litter

Maintenance crews mow only within 15 feet of the pavement, he explained. Not only does the department save about $500,000 a year in mowing costs, but the tall grasses keep litter out of sight (and out of mind) and provide shelter for birds and small animals.

Probably the most widely known and acclaimed handiwork of the design department is the series of rest areas that line Nebraska's interstate system.

Architects combined psychology and logic to come up with attractive rest stops to lure people off the highway and out of their cars "to get the blood circulating again."

Bear's Burial Planned

©The New York Times

Washington — With a seriousness befitting any legislation, a House agriculture subcommittee approved Wednesday a resolution declaring:

"That it is the sense of the Congress that when Smokey Bear goes to that great honey tree in the sky it is just and fitting that he shall be returned home to his place of birth, Capitan, New Mexico, for proper disposition and a permanent memorial in or near the Capitan among the cool green mountains where he was born."

It's about like a human being preparing his will," said Rep. Harold Runnels, D-N.M. "We're just getting ready."

Smokey Bear, who resides at the National Zoo, is 24 years old. He is rather grumpy, sleeps a lot and walks stiff-legged, but a U.S. Forest Service official said the bear seemed to be in good health.

Nixon Denies Authorizing Break-In

Washington (AP) — President Nixon in written statements, said under oath Wednesday he did not authorize the break-in to obtain psychological information about the man who leaked the Pentagon Papers.

In statements read by the judge to the plumbers trial jury, Nixon said he created a special investigative unit at the White House to plug leaks of vital national security material. But he denied authorizing a break-in committed by members of the unit — known as the plumbers — at the office of psychiatrist Dr. Lewis J. Fielding.

Nixon's comment in sworn answers to written interrogatories sent to him by the court Tuesday night, put a dramatic climax on the two-week-old trial of four plumbers defendants, including John D. Ehrlichman, Nixon's one-time chief domestic adviser.

The defense had rested a short time earlier after hearing Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger testify that he did not order or request a psychological profile of Daniel Ellsberg, who leaked the Pentagon Papers to the press and who had been treated by Fielding at the doctor's Beverly Hills, Calif., office.

The others on trial, G. Gordon Liddy, Bernard L. Barker and Eugenio R. Martinez, are charged in the conspiracy count.

The extremely rare presidential submission to the court included:

Q. Did you ever authorize anyone on the White House staff to search the files of Dr. Fielding for information about Dr. Ellsberg without a warrant or the permission of Dr. Fielding, or to hire others to do so?

A. No.

Nixon said in response to another question that he first learned of the Fielding break-in on March 17, 1973, the day Ehrlichman testified he told Nixon of it. That was a year and a half after the break-in.

The special unit was created, said Nixon, "to prevent and halt leaks of vital security information, and to prepare an accurate history of certain critical national security matters which occurred under prior administrations."

"I instructed John D. Ehrlichman to exercise general supervisory control over the Special Investigations Unit," Nixon said.

Asked if he had ever instructed Ehrlichman not to discuss with outsiders the activities of the unit before or after the break-in, including the FBI, Nixon said he did "not have a precise recollection of instructions given to Mr. Ehrlichman with respect to any specific agencies."

"In substance, however, I do recall repeatedly emphasizing to Mr. Ehrlichman that this was a highly classified matter which could be discussed with others only on an absolutely 'need to know' basis," the President said.

"I conveyed these instructions because I believed that the unit could not function effectively if its existence or the nature and details of its work were compromised by disclosure," Nixon said.

David R. Young co-director of the plumbers and a prosecution witness, had testified that Ehrlichman relayed word last year that Nixon wanted members of the unit to refuse to answer official questions about the break-in.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell read the questions and Nixon's answers to the jury. William A. Frates, Ehrlichman's chief lawyer, asked Kissinger only one question: whether prior to Aug. 12, 1971 he had authorized Young to request the CIA to draw up a psychological profile of Ellsberg.

"I did not," Kissinger replied.

Philip Bakes, an assistant Watergate special prosecutor, had two questions on cross-examination.

Q. Apart from whether you authorized a direct psychological profile, did you have any knowledge that a psychological profile was being worked on by the CIA or David Young?

A. I had no such knowledge.

Q. Did you have any knowledge whether there was a plan to obtain psychological information regarding Daniel Ellsberg or his psychological files from his psychiatrist?

A. I had no such knowledge.

Zoo Rescues Buzzing Gem

Antelope Zoo personnel say an unusual event during the recent national Rock and Gem mineral show in Lincoln illustrates the need to check hollow wood picked up in the wild.

The zoo reports that after one display was set up at the show, a buzzing sound was heard from a piece of wood which had been picked up in South Dakota as a part of the display.

Zoo personnel were called and when they checked over the display found a 3½ foot prairie rattlesnake among the cracks in the wood — "very much alive and . . . carefully removed."

The reptile was sent to the Chicago zoo, since Lincoln zoos do not house any poisonous reptiles.

Alcohol Problems Cost $25 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare told Congress Wednesday that alcoholism and alcohol-related problems cost the U.S. economy more than $25 billion a year.

HEW's second special report entitled "Alcohol and Health," also cites suggestions that excessive alcohol consumption, especially when combined with smoking, may contribute to the development of certain cancers.

The report broke down the cost of alcohol consumption this way: $9.35 billion in lost production of goods and services, $8.29 billion for health and medical care, $6.44 billion in motor vehicle accidents, and $640 million in alcohol program and research costs. In addition, more than $500 million is spent in criminal justice costs, $2.2 billion in welfare payments, $135 million in social services costs and "a considerable portion" of the $4.5 billion in fire losses, the report said.

Cancers of the mouth, pharynx, larynx, and esophagus, and primary cancer of the liver, "appear to be definitely related to heavy alcohol intake in the United States and parts of the world where these occur with high frequency in men," the report said.

Heavy smoking and heavy drinking seem to be particularly implicated in mouth, pharynx and larynx cancer, it said.

In addition, the report said, cancer of the pancreas may also be associated with alcoholism.

Government researchers said they were uncertain how alcohol may act to cause cancer.

The report said that alcohol, unlike smoking and high blood pressure, does not appear to be a significant risk factor associated with coronary heart disease.

But recent clinical studies have indicated that consumption of even moderate amounts of alcohol can cause stress in the main heart muscle.

Studying the long term trends of alcohol consumption in the United States, researchers have estimated that as many as 10 million people are alcoholics or have drinking problems.

The federal report cited preliminary findings from a new national survey of junior and senior high school students showing among seventh graders, 63 per cent of boys and 54 per cent of girls have had a drink. The figures rise with educational level, with 83 per cent of 12th grade boys and 87 per cent of 12th grade girls reporting they have had a drink.

Warren To Lie In State: Funeral Service Friday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The body of Earl Warren will lie in state Thursday in a white marble corridor of the Supreme Court, where he served for 16 years as Chief Justice of the United States.

Funeral services for the nation's 14th Chief Justice, who died Tuesday night at the age of 83, will be held Friday at Washington Cathedral.

Burial will follow at 3 p.m. in Arlington National Cemetery. Warren, who served as an infantry lieutenant in World War I, will receive military honors.

Past and present justices of the court will be honorary pallbearers.

At the court, a black draped chair used by Warren when he was chief justice, will stand behind the casket.

Tributes to Warren continued to flow in.

President Nixon called him "a man to whom the public trust was a sacred trust." Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who succeeded Warren in 1969, said Warren's life "epitomized the American dream."

Dutch Oil Boycott Ended By Arabs

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Arab oil ministers decided quickly Wednesday to lift their oil embargo against the Netherlands, an act that brought public rejoicing in the Dutch port of Rotterdam.

The embargo had been imposed nine months ago against the United States and the Netherlands as a protest against their support for Israel in the Middle East war.

It was lifted for the United States last March 19 but was officially maintained against Holland, although that country continued to receive substantial oil supplies.

In Rotterdam, the world's largest port and a major oil shipping center for Europe, the city flew its ceremonial flag, reserved for special occasions, from the City Hall. Its important oil trade with other consuming countries had been curtailed by the boycott. In The Hague the Foreign Ministry declared, "Apart from the favorable aspects it has for the Netherlands economy, the Dutch government wants to stress that this decision will stimulate the development of good relations between Holland and the Arab world, as the Netherlands has always wanted."

Following announcement of the decision in Cairo, Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani stated, "All the members were convinced the Dutch government's attitude toward the Middle East had changed and lifting the embargo was imminent."

The decision came within 15 minutes of the opening of a meeting of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Simon Sees Oil Price Dip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, who leaves Thursday on an official tour of the Middle East, said Wednesday he believes world oil prices will decline in the near future.

Lower oil prices, Simon said in a news conference, will be in "everybody's best interest, producers and users alike."

The former energy chief said the subject of oil prices and oil production will be among topics for discussion with leaders of Arab oil producing nations.

Simon will visit Egypt, Israel, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait before continuing to Europe for talks in Germany, France and Great Britain and returns to Washington July 27.

Senate Votes For Veto Over Nixon N-Pledges

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Tuesday voted unanimously to give Congress veto power over President Nixon's promise to provide Egypt and Israel with nuclear reactors.

The Senate approved the bill 96-0 after more than three hours debate. An identical bill is awaiting House action.

Under this bill, the agreements with Egypt and Israel could not go into effect if the Senate and the House approved concurrent resolutions rejecting the proposals.

The resolutions would be binding on Nixon and could not be vetoed.

Although the legislation does not single out the proposed agreements with Israel and Egypt, Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., made it clear that the promise of nuclear reactors for the two nations spurred the proposed change in the 20-year-old law.

"Because of the sensitivities involved in the Middle East, the Joint Atomic Committee became concerned with the law," Pastore told the Senate.

Under present law, Nixon need only transmit an agreement with his endorsement to the Joint Atomic Committee for a period of 30 days.

The only way Congress could block an agreement would be to pass a bill in opposition, which then could be vetoed.

Russian Says U.S. To Blame

MOSCOW (AP) — A leading Soviet official blamed the United States on Wednesday night for the Russian-American failure to reach a summit agreement banning all underground nuclear tests.

Leonid Zamyatin, general director of the official news agency Tass and a Soviet spokesman at the recent Moscow summit, told a television audience the government favors a complete halt of underground nuclear testing.

Both the Soviet Union and the United States were reported to have conducted underground nuclear tests Wednesday, only a week after signing an accord to limit such tests.

Zamyatin said an explanation for failure to agree on a total ban "should be sought, above all, in the position of the United States."

Campaign Money Spent On Nixon, Reports Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Florida banker C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo spent more than $50,000 for President Nixon's personal benefit between 1968 and 1972, and at least some of the money came from Nixon campaign contributions, the Senate Watergate committee staff said Wednesday.

The staff report, which has been challenged by presidential lawyer James St. Clair, cites a swimming pool, a billiard table, pool furniture and carpeting and a pair of platinum and diamond earrings for Mrs. Nixon among the uses to which the money was put.

There is no specific prohibition in the federal campaign law against using campaign contributions for personal expenses. But the Internal Revenue Service said such funds would then become taxable income for the individual involved.

However, the records reflecting the expenditures by Rebozo were withheld from the accounting firm that examined President Nixon's assets and liabilities last year, even though Nixon was "aware of and concurred in at least some of these improvements to his property," the committee staff's report said.

And copies of President Nixon's income taxes for 1969 through 1972 made public last year by the White House, do not list any gifts from Rebozo.

The report said that campaign contributions were the only apparent source for more than $20,000 in cash purchases made by Rebozo for Nixon in November 1972 alone.

Other large amounts were paid out for expensive improvements to Nixon's Key Biscayne, Fla., estate from trust accounts set up by Rebozo in his lawyer's name, "a process which concealed the source of the funds," the report said.

Three trust accounts apparently were used to conceal the use of nearly $5,000 in contributions to Nixon's 1972 campaign to buy a pair of platinum and diamond earrings which were Nixon's present to his wife on her 60th birthday in 1972, the report said.

The report, which was authorized for release by the full Watergate committee, states that investigators have identified $45,621 paid out by Rebozo for improvements and furnishings at the President's estate.

The report said Rebozo, a Key Biscayne banker and Nixon's closest personal friend, paid $11,978 for converting a garage into living quarters; $18,435 for a 20-by-40-foot swimming pool, pool heater, pool carpeting, pool furniture and other accessories; $6,508 to extend a roof; $3,586 for a fireplace; $243 for a putting green; $1,138 for a pool table; $3,335 for architect fees and $395 for an architectural model of one of Nixon's houses.

Ehrlichman Went After O'Brien

The report quoted Ehrlichman as saying in sworn testimony, "I wanted them to turn up something and send (O'Brien) to jail before the election and unfortunately it didn't materialize."

The report said IRS officials found nothing amiss in O'Brien's tax returns.

O'Brien, informed of the contents of the report by a newsman, said, "I am completely appalled and disgusted."

The report says Ehrlichman, who was President Nixon's chief domestic adviser, repeatedly pressed various officials to investigate O'Brien, to see if there was anything illegal about payments his consulting firm received from a firm owned by billionaire Howard R. Hughes.

It said Ehrlichman castigated the head of the IRS for taking too long to call O'Brien in for an interview, and that the White House aide passed along sensitive tax information about O'Brien to President Nixon.

Ehrlichman became interested in the Hughes money to O'Brien when he found out about it in a "sensitive case

The long investigation by the Watergate committee staff was triggered by the disclosure last year that Rebozo had received two $50,000 payments from billionaire Howard Hughes after the 1968 presidential campaign.

Investigators made a painstaking examination of the $100 bills that were eventually returned to Hughes by Rebozo.

They said there is substantial physical evidence to contradict Rebozo's sworn testimony that he returned to Hughes in 1973 the same bills he had originally received. They said Rebozo's testimony could not be disapproved, however.

Committee Chairman Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., said in a statement attached to the staff report that the report does not seek to draw final conclusions "but rather provides the factual results of our investigation."

St. Clair said Nixon is confident that the audit made by the firm of Coopers and Lybrand fully reflects his receipts and expenditures for the period.

Herbert W. Kalmbach, Nixon's former personal attorney and a principal campaign fund raiser, told the committee that on April 30, 1973, Rebozo told him that he had spent some of the money received from Hughes on F. Donald Nixon, Edward Nixon and on Rose Mary Woods, the President's personal secretary.

The committee sought to prove or disprove Kalmbach's testimony but was blocked by Rebozo's refusal to produce all documents requested, the report said.

The report said that the payments it has identified were made by Rebozo even though Rebozo has the authority to draw against Nixon's account at the Key Biscayne bank for all expenses associated with the Nixon property.

"Although he has regularly used his procedure, he did not do so for these transactions," the report said.

It said Rebozo did not file a U.S. gift tax return to account for his purchases for Nixon despite the requirements of the tax code.

It reported Nixon reimbursed Rebozo $13,642 for part of the cost of building the swimming pool.

But it said the reimbursement came after Rebozo returned the $100,000 to representatives of Hughes and even though the President's auditors' report reflected no debt owed Rebozo by Nixon.

After the Rebozo report was released, White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said: "These unsubstantiated charges have been leaked and leaked and now the committee is trying to serve them up for the third time around. It's just warmed-over baloney."

Mitchell Questioned; Doesn't Recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell fenced for hours Wednesday with House impeachment investigators.

"He's trying to get the benefit of the Fifth Amendment without using it," commented Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, about Mitchell's testimony before a closed session of the House Judiciary Committee.

"He doesn't recall things," said Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., R-N.Y.

"He's a genius at not recollecting."

Mitchell reportedly told the committee that he did not wish to plead the Fifth Amendment against self-incrimination but neither did he want to prejudice his right to a fair trial in the Watergate cover-up case.

But it was the cover-up that the committee wanted to know about. The panel was interested in the events of March 21, 1973, the day President Nixon and aides discussed demands for money from Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr. and also the day $75,000 was delivered to Hunt's lawyer, William O. Bittman.

The cover-up indictment listed among the overt acts in the alleged conspiracy a telephone conversation between Mitchell and H. R. Haldeman, White House staff chief, at 12.30 p.m. on March 21.

But Mitchell told the committee the telephone call had nothing to do with Watergate or payments to Hunt. He said Haldeman called to tell him the President wanted him to come to Washington.

The Haldeman-Mitchell conversation took place shortly after a conversation Nixon had with Haldeman and John W. Dean III in which the Hunt demand was discussed.

According to the Judiciary Committee transcript of that discussion, Nixon at one point, referring to the money for Hunt, said, "For Christ's sake, get it."

James D. St. Clair, the President's impeachment defense lawyer, has tried to establish that the $75,000 delivered to Bittman the evening of March 21, was arranged for in a telephone conversation before the Nixon meeting.

That conversation was between Dean and Frederick C. LaRue. But when LaRue testified before the committee he was unable to say definitely what time of day he talked to Dean. He said he thought it was in the morning but that it could have been later.

LaRue subsequently talked to Mitchell, who authorized payment of the money which was described as being for attorneys' fees and living expenses.

But Mitchell reportedly told the committee his records showed he talked to LaRue on March 20 not on the 21st.

Mitchell is scheduled to go on trial Sept. 9 in the cover-up case.

Before the morning session, St. Clair told reporters he believes transcripts of presidential conversations released by the committee and the White House are substantially the same.

Interests Increase Kitties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political special interest groups already have almost twice as much cash available for this fall's congressional candidates as they spent two years ago, Common Cause reported Wednesday. The American Medical Association heads the list, leapfrogging the milk producers.

In 1972 the groups spent $9.7 million in Senate and House races. As of May 31 the same business, agriculture, health, labor and other special interests had $17.4 million at hand.

John W. Gardner, chairman of the self-styled citizens lobby, coupled release of the report with a plea to Congress to pass pending legislation "for new clean sources of campaign funds."

"When Kalmbach and Stans swept through the corporate front offices of America like Sherman marching through Georgia, they totally destroyed the credibility of the old system," Gardner said. "They didn't destroy the system. It lives."

Herbert W. Kalmbach, President Nixon's former personal lawyer, recently went to prison for violating campaign laws. Maurice H. Stans was Nixon's chief fund raiser in 1972.

The leaders in available funds are the AMA with $1.8 million, the political arm of the Associated Milk Producers with $1.6 million and the Marine Engineers Union with $910,000.

NEW YORK — The next time President Nixon sets out to seek a detente with an old foe, he should give some thought to getting together with the people we stole this country from: the American Indians. We are an extraordinarily generous nation, perennially ready to heap goods, services, manpower, money and nuclear reactors on the peoples of the world. Provided they are not American Indians, of course.

Mr. Nixon gave Mr. Brezhnev a Chevrolet Monte Carlo this time, to go with the Lincoln Continental and Cadillac presentations of 1972 and 1973. All sorts of goodies have been dispensed elsewhere this year to leaders of Austria, Egypt, Saudi Arabia (I think we gave King Faisal another oil well), Syria, Israel, Jordan, Portugal and Belgium. But we're about to evict one Indian tribe, the Havasupai, from lands they have worked for 1,300 years!

They now have to come to the Great White Father hat in hand to get a permit to use their 251,000 acres on the brink of the Grand Canyon. The permits may be revoked on the whim or indifference of some deskbound paleface at the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The Havasupai Indians have long been called "The People of the Grand Canyon." That could be changed to "The People IN the Grand Canyon." They have been largely herded into 518 acres at the bottom of the Canyon, all but inaccessible and subject to intensely cold winters. It makes Devil's Island look like Palm Beach.

Congress now has a chance to clear its conscience in this particular phase of the long-time abuse and neglect of the original occupants of the nation. It will vote soon on S. 1296, a bill to double the size of Grand Canyon National Park, and on an amendment sponsored by Rep. Sam Steiger (R. Ariz.) that would grant the Havasupai trust title to their 251,000 acres up there on the lip of the grand old hole in the earth. If passed, the tribal chiefs would no longer be forced to go whimpering to Washington for permission to survive.

Senators Ted Kennedy, Barry Goldwater, Henry Jackson, Hubert Humphrey, and Rep. Morris K. Udall, Arizona Democrat, are firmly behind the Havasupai. The opposition is the always well-entrenched conservationists. Addressing himself to them, Sen. Kennedy has said:

"The Havasupai have absolutely no desire or intention to use their land base for any purpose other than those which they have pursued for 1,300 years. They are not going to build a dam, or put up a factory, or launch a tourist extravaganza, or undertake any other environmentally unsound project.

"Rather, they are intent upon preserving and protecting the natural, undeveloped, and unspoiled beauty of their homeland, and are perfectly prepared to accept language to provide comprehensive land use planning for the new trust area or any other reasonable requirements Congress might impose to assure environmental protection and consistency of use with the adjacent and enlarged Grand Canyon National Park.

"Justice for the Havasupai is in no way inconsistent with the enhanced environmental protection for the entire Grand Canyon area. The 251,000-acre use area upon which the Havasupai depend for survival is the core of their immortal homeland. It should be confirmed to them now in trust title, and their fears for the future laid to rest."

The Havasupai need that acreage for grazing, housing, agriculture, burial grounds and religious shrines. Incredibly all but the first are now denied them. Alvin M. Josephy, Jr., Senior Editor of American Heritage and an outstanding authority on Indian history, does not share the misgivings of fellow conservationists. In a plea for the passage of the amendment to S. 1296 he has said:

"Today, down in the Canyon, the Havasupai people face extinction from disease, poverty, and the eventual collapse of their society, their culture and their religion."

Lo, the poor Indian — how badly the relative newcomers to his lands have treated him! It all started with Christopher Columbus on October 12, 1492, when he gave them a wrong name — believing he had reached "the Indies." The Spanish, Dutch, English and French took turns exploiting and exterminating them. Then along came the Glorious 4th of July, 1776, and we took over where the others left off. We called them savages, which apparently condoned the savage treatment of them. Two years short of 200 years later, we still push them around as if we actually owned this land of the free and home of the brave.

Change And Earl Warren

As a liberal California politician who had in 1948 been the Republican nominee for vice president and had twice seen his own presidential aspirations frustrated, Earl Warren in 1952 helped to swing the GOP convention from the conservative Robert Taft to Gen. Eisenhower.

Eisenhower, as president in 1953, nominated Gov. Warren as Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court and during the next 16 years the court, with Warren at the helm, surprised the nation with decision after decision which wrought changes in American society and politics that might otherwise not have been accomplished.

Warren died Tuesday at the age of 83, one of the most distinguished, honored and controversial of Americans, and after a 52-year career in public service which took him from a prosecuting attorney's post in Oakland to the highest pinnacle of the federal judiciary and which saw his name stamped on the investigation of one of the most ignominious deeds of our time, the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

Warren may not have been the impetus behind every social change the court's decisions generated, but because it took on his name in public parlance, the "Warren Court," the chief justice bore the brunt of both the criticism and the praise from a society which needed change but was not quite ready to get on with it.

During those 16 years Warren and his colleagues wrote such far-reaching decisions as those which banned racial segregation in public schools; decreed that legislative and congressional districts be reapportioned along one man, one vote lines; required the protection of the rights of the accused, especially the indigent and the ignorant; outlawed segregation in public facilities and banned discrimination in housing sales and rentals and furthered the distinction between church and state by banning prescribed prayers and Bible-reading in the public schools.

Warren once lamented that perhaps the court did not go far enough in some of its decisions and might have made others, and he also observed sadly that the political and social institutions were moving much too slowly in following through with the thrust of the court's rulings.

Warren's was an activist court and legal scholars and political philosophers today will still argue about the merits of judicial activism and whether or not it should be left to the elected legislators and executives to change society.

But the Warren Court filled a void that needed filling and made the Constitution a truly living document.

Warren's appointment as chief justice was a fortuitous event. But it happened because it did and because of what he and his colleagues decided, Earl Warren can be remembered as one of the most important and influential figures ever to have served the Republic.

Plus, Minus Of Credit Reporting

One plank in the Nebraska Democratic Party platform adopted in Norfolk late last month, under the section on law and justice, read: "We condemn the compiling of credit reports, domestic spying and wiretapping by government or private agencies."

Hardly anyone will argue in favor of the latter two brands of invasion of privacy, but it seems that the reference to the compiling of credit reports has created somewhat of a stir.

For our part, we see the need for a record on which lending institutions and suppliers of goods and services can base their decisions relating to the extension of credit.

But all too often — and this is what we think the delegates at Norfolk and others are objecting to — reports from credit sleuths are vague, out-of-date, selective and in part based on hearsay and not hard fact. Plus, people who apply for credit are often assessed ridiculous fees to have their potential creditors find out false or incomplete information. And if a person wants to simply find out what secrets the credit reporting files hold, he must pay a fee if he has not been denied credit within the past 30 days. And if he has been denied credit, he can see the report without charge, but too often he is lectured to in addition to being given a simple recitation of the information on file.

At times the credit reporting industry oversteps its bounds and handles people and aspects of their private lives in a singularly arrogant manner. If the industry would put its house in order, stick to the facts and keep up to date, there would be no need for political parties to condemn it and its excesses.

Army Rebuked In 'River Killers'

WASHINGTON — The Army Corps of Engineers have never learned that it's not nice to fool Mother Nature. But they're fast finding out that they shouldn't mess around with Martin Heuvelmans.

For more than a decade, this 71-year-old retired businessman has been investigating the engineer corps' 150-year, $28 billion effort to facelift the American continent. His findings have so rattled the brass hats that they have issued official orders on how to handle him.

This remarkable tale began in 1959, when Heuvelmans, a Belgian immigrant, bought a small plot of land in southern Florida and settled down to fish away his sunset years.

By day, Heuvelmans and his grandson angled the beautiful St. Lucie River for trout. In the evening, they dined on the day's catch.

On occasion, he noticed, the river turned muddy and the trout stopped running. He queried his neighbors. "Oh, that's the Army engineers running mud through the dam," they told him.

Heuvelmans thought about it. The more he pondered, the angrier he got. He conducted his own private investigation and concluded that the tons of sludge pouring down the river resulted, he said, from "the incompetent construction" of the St. Lucie Canal by the Army Corps of Engineers.

The corps, however, was too busy damming rivers, filling swamps and digging canals to bother with the protests of a testy old man who couldn't catch enough trout. So Heuvelmans complained to some congressmen. Their form letters thanked him for writing and assured him of the corps' concern for the public welfare.

Incensed, Heuvelmans launched a full-scale probe of corps projects across the nation. After a decade of digging, his findings have now been published in a book, "The River Killers." It is bylined simply "Martin Heuvelmans, Citizen."

The book describes how the corps "defiled Florida's waterways" with silt, sludge and slime. It attacks "the corps' wanton killing of America's rivers" from the Potomac to the Sacramento Delta.

The corps survives, Heuvelmans charges, by spending $1.6 billion annually on pork barrel projects dear to the hearts of powerful congressmen. The civil works branch of the corps, Heuvelmans concludes, should be abolished.

Heuvelmans' publisher, Stackpole Books of Harrisburg, Pa., arranged a publicity tour for the septuagenarian author. To everyone's surprise, however, Army Corps of Engineers spokesmen refused to appear on radio or television to reply to Heuvelmans. A general who had been scheduled to appear with Heuvelmans on Metromedia's Panorama television talk show in Washington, for example, backed out at the last minute.

We have now found out why. An internal corps memo, entitled "Policy Guidance on Responding to Inquiries on Book 'The River Killers,'" explains it all.

Falsely charging that Heuvelmans had paid to get his own book published, the memo instructs corps employees: "Caution should be exercised to avoid helping the sale of the book. Debate with the author either in person, on radio, or on television should not be sought and avoided insofar as possible."

The brass hats ordered "a conscious effort" be made "to emphasize the positive aspects . . . of Corps activities . . . A large number of Congressional inquiries regarding the book are anticipated. We are preparing a generalized response to the earliest of these, and will provide a copy to the field for reference and consistency."

We asked the engineers why they had turned their bulldozers against an old man whose only sin was to criticize them. An Army spokesman answered with a rhetorical question: "The guy is so biased, what could we gain by contradicting what he says, besides helping him sell the book?" The corps does respond to "responsible" criticism, the spokesman added.

Two years ago, Martin Heuvelmans gave up his waterfront house on the turgid St. Lucie and moved into a mobile home. He is catching no trout these days, but he is continuing his lonely battle against the muckers who dared pollute his river.

Our Saving On Water

Lincoln, Neb.

With an emergency facing us, the mayor has called for voluntary measures in saving water. This is something we should have been doing, anyway. Our lack of mere common sense never ceases to amaze me.

We are a self-centered, selfish, spoiled and indulged people. Luxuries become everyday necessities to us almost immediately. But advertisers seem to unite a group and often bring out the better nature. Let us hope that this will be the case with our water problem, both the immediate matter and for the future.

We are all aware of and incensed at the undue waste of a precious commodity when we see it running down the gutters. This should never be allowed and should be stopped at once. But we can go much further in our curtailment, with no discomfort to ourselves. We may even take pride in doing this, as good citizens, and remembering our sturdy pioneer ancestors.

Commercial car washes should be shut down at once. We wash our family buggy twice a year, once in the spring and once in the fall when we wax for the seasons ahead. No car in the Midwest is bothered with mud just now. A fine dust is about all there is, and this can be wiped clean.

On a lesser scale but important, we can take baths in amazingly shallow depths. I remember when our hot water heater was out of commission a few days and everything had to be heated in pots and kettles. We got quite clean in about an inch and a half of water in the tub. Dishes can be saved up and a lot washed with the same amount of water that is used for a few.

When you stop and think of several gallons run out just to get a cool drink, it is ridiculous. The habit of keeping a bottle of water in the refrigerator can eliminate this. And fruit juices and vegetable juices can be substituted. Let the floor go unscrubbed a while. It's no big deal. The little folks would probably be in enthusiastic agreement on no baths, at all. This can be moderated. The "spit" or bowl sponging can take the place once in a while of the water-using shower. I skipped my morning shower today and didn't notice anyone moving away from my close presence.

Lawns and flowers are not going to suffer unduly from the every-other-day watering. As with dishes, a lot of clothes can be done in the same amount as a few.

We can think of many other small ways to help. The individual effort is no great big deal, but collectively it adds up. Let's all do our part. Don't be angry if you see your neighbor goofing off. Don't join him in being a poor citizen. Remind him cheerfully that little drops add up to mighty deluge.

We at the Chemical Dependency Unit are pleased with the fine articles by Star Staff Writer Liane Guenther concerning alcohol and alcoholism recently. I believe she made some very good observations concerning the problems of adolescent drinking.

Hopefully, many parents will have gotten new insights into a growing problem in Lincoln.

I also feel Mrs. Guenther did an outstanding job in relating the views of the various staff members of the Chemical Dependency Unit.

Public Losing Interest

Lincoln, Neb.

Everyone seems to be angry at Patricia Hearst, despite the fact that she may be a hostage. Is her father obeying orders, or will any publisher in the United States or worldwide dare print anything by anybody not approved by the instigators of these pop-up dictators?

Maybe the FBI wants to look bad, to give the militants a headstart, including Watergate, revenue, labor and all the major emergencies that are cleaning out government, not cleaning up politics. J. Edgar Hoover didn't reign supreme for over 49 years without staffing his boys to suit his own purposes.

The public has lost interest and the murder of Martin Luther King's mother is another prairie backfire that might burn itself out, with common sense. Americans are tired, hungry and bored. Murder has become a habit and headlines are a waste of ink.

No woodpile ever scared William Randolph Hearst and if there was anything rotten in Denmark, he wasn't scared of the stink. He wound up a billionaire, and that's bread!

Sounds Of Desperation

Blair, Neb.

Richard Marvel, the Republican candidate for governor of this great state, is already making desperate sounds like those of a person going down for the third time in a lake, and with the election still several months away. He is swinging wild and at random. It doesn't take a poll to tell us why, but I would ask Richard, the mini-marvel, if he thinks it is really worth all the effort in this heat.

For Mr. Marvel to suggest that any one man runs 350 Democratic delegates to a state party convention is nothing less than absurd. I was one of the delegates. The platform as drawn up and submitted by the duly selected platform committee was hammered out in typical Democratic style, leaving a little something for everyone — the very same way that Republican platforms are conceived and voted in, and rarely ever again referred to by anyone.

It is true that some amendments were slipped in by die-hard zealots of the well known self-interest groups who are always willing to hang in there for their cause to the bitter end. I was one of those who wore down and left early. Had I remained, I would have offered some resistance to the "gay amendment" for one. But when it is all said and done, what actual harm has been done, Mr. Marvel?

I can sympathize, in some measure, with candidate Marvel. It must be frustrating to be so completely outclassed and out-distanced by an adversary in a race for leadership.

Seeking Some Friendly Help

Lincoln, Neb.

We should take advantage of the wonderful opportunity presented by the presence of the Sioux Indians visiting here. Let's get these red brothers to take a recess from the courtroom and do a rain dance.

If their effort succeeds, we'll gladly give them the keys to the city, membership in the country club, or perhaps even acquittal.

FBI Talks Held Before Release

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

The chief jailer of the Pine Ridge, S.D., jail during the Wounded Knee occupation testified Wednesday that prisoners were required to have an interview with the FBI before they were taken before a magistrate.

The jailer, David L. Steele, also said during a portion of the occupation, prisoners in the jail were not permitted to see lawyers.

Steele was called by the defense in the case of Gregorio Jaramillo and Michael Sturdevant, who are charged with impeding federal officers during a civil disorder by attempting to enter Wounded Knee with supplies.

Whose Order?
Asked who told him that prisoners were not to be released until after an FBI interview, Steele said he believed the order came from the government command post at Wounded Knee.

Under questioning by Judge Warren K. Urbom, Steele testified that it was common knowledge in the jail that prisoners didn't get out until after an FBI interview.

Steele testified that prisoners were not allowed to talk to their lawyers under tribal policy at the Pine Ridge reservation, a policy he said was changed later after two attorneys "raised a ruckus."

Suppression Evidence
Steele's testimony came in a hearing on a motion to suppress evidence resulting from the arrest, search and questioning of Sturdevant and Jaramillo.

Oral arguments on the motion were expected Thursday morning, and a ruling was expected soon after the arguments.

U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom earlier Wednesday denied a defense request that witnesses, including Richard Klendienst and Elliott Richardson, be subpoenaed to testify in the trial of two Wounded Knee defendants.

Defense attorneys had argued that prosecution of Jaramillo and Sturdevant should not be sustained in light of allegedly illegal massive military intervention at Wounded Knee.

Unauthorized Use
Unauthorized use of military equipment and personnel, defense attorneys said, is punishable by a $10,000 fine or two years in prison or both.

In denial of the request, Urbom wrote, "In no way do I willingly applaud, approve or tolerate unlawful acts by government personnel.

"Illegality is ugly, whoever commits it. But the best remedy for concurrent or intertwined illegal acts by two persons is not for both to go free from the penalty of law, but that both feel the penalty."

"The world cannot be set aright in a single trial; a court may be compelled, in a particular case, to choose between wrongdoers for the duration of that trial. It does not follow that a defeat of justice is inevitable."

Ellsberg Case
Noting that the defense had drawn an analogy with the Daniel Ellsberg case, Urbom said the case of Jaramillo and Sturdevant so far contains none of the aspects on which the Ellsberg cases rests.

In the Ellsberg case, Urbom wrote, the judge concluded that a fair trial was impossible because of vast interference by the prosecutorial and investigatory segments of the government with preservation and presentation of evidence.

In the case before him, Urbom said, "There has been no governmental loss of vital evidence, no refusal or inability to produce such evidence, no interference by anyone with the gathering, preserving or presenting of evidence at the trial."

Exclusionary Rule
Urbom also said he cannot faithfully "burgeon" the exclusionary rule into one which discharges a defendant whenever illegal acts by the government — not the prosecution — is present at the scene of the crime with which the defendants are charged.

The exclusionary rule declares that evidence obtained illegally cannot be used against the defendant.

In other testimony Wednesday, which has no bearing on the motion to suppress evidence, Joseph Trimbach, who was in charge of FBI agents at Wounded Knee, testified that government roadblocks established a perimeter around Wounded Knee.

Didn't Know
Asked by defense attorney Clyde Henning how a person would know when he crossed this imaginary line, Trimbach answered, "I don't know."

Trimbach also testified that one of the roadblocks was moved shortly after it was set up

Voting Members Cut From Crime Group

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The Region II Crime Commission Wednesday heeded the advice of its reorganization committee and decided to reduce the number of voting members from 25 to 17.

The action was in response to a requirement recently placed on regional commissions by the State Crime Commission.

New rules require that the majority of a regional commission be composed of elected public officials. Since the Region II commission has nine elected officials, only eight of the 16 other members could retain their voting rights.

Voting Officials
In addition to the nine officials and Leighton Wessel, who represents Police Chief Joe Carroll, the voting members are Roger Larson, commission chairman, Dr. R. L. Fredstrom, Ken Bader, Eric McMasters, Fred Holbert, Ray Götner and Maurice Russell.

Commissioner Götner, who presided at Wednesday's meeting, urged the eight non-voting members to continue attending meetings and to continue their work on various projects and committees. The only change, he said, is that those eight members will no longer be able to vote on commission decisions.

The commission also heard a report from personnel committee chairman Fred Holbert on the status of the selection of a regional director.

Unanswered Questions
Holbert said some questions

Lacy Director Of Rehabilitation

Gene H. Lacy has been appointed director of Vocational Rehabilitation Services for the Lincoln Goodwill Industries. His appointment is effective July 15. Lacy was rehabilitation director of the Martin Luther Home at Beatrice since 1968.

He has a BA degree from Fort Hayes State College, Fort Hayes, Kan., and an MA degree from the University of Nebraska.

concerning the proposed director's salary, benefits and authority remain unanswered. About 20 persons have submitted applications for the post, he said, and his committee will narrow down the field to two or three before submitting their names to the full commission for a vote.

Commission member Sue Bailey suggested that the group establish a "chain of authority," outlining how the new director would relate to the mayor, the City Council and the County Board.

"Before we hire someone, we should establish who can fire him," she said.

Grant Approved
In other business, the commission approved a $7,200 federal grant for the Lincoln Police Dept. to send personnel to training schools and conferences during 1975. Total cost of the program is $8,000, with the rest of the money to come from state and local sources.

The commission also approved a $45,500 federal grant for the Juvenile Attention Center to be built near South Street between 10th and 11th. Total project cost is $91,000.

The facility will be a holding center for juveniles awaiting court hearings.

Higher Costs
County Board Chairman Robert Cohn said the need for additional funds resulted from higher-than-expected construction costs and an enlargement of the center from the original plans.

Originally, the estimated cost of the center was $300,000.

Both grant applications will be sent to the State Crime Commission.

School Aid Drive Submits Petitions

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A $160 million state aid to schools law will stand or fall at the hands of Nebraska voters this fall, preliminary indications were Wednesday.

Sen. Ramey Whitney of Chappell and S. H. "Zeke" Brauer Jr., head of the Nebraska School Improvement Association (NSIA), said Wednesday they turned in more than 37,000 signatures of voters who want to see the issue on the November ballot.

Slightly more than 23,000 signatures are necessary, according to Secretary of State Allen Beermann, who received the petitions one hour and a half before Wednesday's 5 p.m. deadline.

Beermann said the process of validating the petitions begins Thursday and will take until Aug. 25-28 before the number of valid signatures is known. Sixteen items must be checked on the petitions, he said.

At a press conference Whitney, Brauer and Sen. David Stahmer expressed confidence that no more than 5% of the signatures will be disqualified.

As late as last Friday Whitney expressed concern that the petition drive might fall short. But in the final hours Whitney said, "The petitions started coming in so fast we could hardly count them. They came from all corners of the state."

Brauer added that the drive "seemed to catch on fire all of a sudden" when the 1,200 people circulating the petitions realized the deadline was approaching.

Whitney said he was "very happy" about the drive's apparent success and added he is "very confident we will repeal LB772 on Nov. 5."

The school aid issue should have "a great impact on the gubernatorial campaign" in November, he said.

The law was passed over incumbent Gov. J. James Exon's veto with the help of Republican gubernatorial nominee Sen. Richard Marvel and Sen. Ernest Chambers, an independent candidate for governor.

Brauer noted that Exon had signed the petition but that his runningmate, Hastings attorney Gerald Whelan, had not. Whelan, a former president of the State Board of Education, has been an advocate of increased aid to education.

The law raises state support for primary and secondary schools from $56 million per year to $160 million in 1977, or approximately half of the schools annual operating costs.

It will require a one-cent hike in the state sales tax and a four-point jump in the income tax. Supporters said the law will ease the burden of property tax payers.

Whitney and his supporters renewed their objections to the law Wednesday, saying it would take away local control of schools, force an increase in state taxes without an equivalent drop in property taxes, fail to equalize educational opportunities and force school districts to drastically hike their budgets.

Stahmer said the law offered no assurance that property tax relief would be passed on to renters.

Whitney said the petition drive will continue to seek contributions so an advertising campaign can be mounted to inform the voters "how bad the bill really is."

In an accompanying financial report, the petition drive reported $3347.57 in contributions and $5,070.69 in expenses.

The largest supporter was Brauer's NSIA which contributed $1,370. The Omaha AFL-CIO gave $535.82, and Whitney gave $100. The bulk of the expenses went for printing costs, postage, telephone bills and legal counsel.

Whitney said most contributors gave $5 or $10; the report indicated most where from rural communities.

Brauer said an amendment to the report would be filed shortly.

Retardation Association Allocated More Funds

The Lincoln Community Services (LCS) executive committee Wednesday approved a supplementary allocation of up to $2,400 for the Capital Association for Retarded Citizens, should CARC incur a deficit.

LCS Executive Director John

Goessman said executive committee members stipulated that CARC should generate as much in funds as it can through program fees and its Honey Sunday campaign this fall, to reduce the amount of extra community funds required.

CARC Executive Director George Crosby a month ago requested $4,798 in emergency funding from LCS to pay for programs through Dec. 31. Crosby said that anticipated deficit would likely result from changes in federal client eligibility and cut-off of federal money.

The LCS executive committee rejected Crosby's first request, maintaining that social service agencies should strive for self-sufficiency in generating revenues.

Rail Loss Doubles

London (AP) — British Rail said it lost $123.8 million in 1973, more than double the state-run railway's 1972 loss.

Deputies Catch Escaped Convict

The second of two inmates who escaped from the Nebraska Penal Complex Tuesday was recaptured late Wednesday morning on a county road south of Hickman, the Lancaster County Sheriff's office reported.

The county sheriff said two deputies apprehended Larry Schovanec, 23, as he was walking along the road. He was serving a 1-to 4-year term for an insufficient funds check.

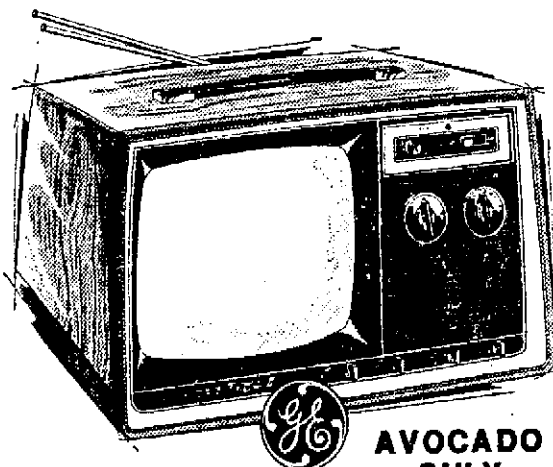

Schovanec escaped from the complex with another inmate who was recaptured Tuesday night.

by Stan Delaplaine

San Francisco — Down to the airport on a bright summer day to meet incoming friends. "Flight Umpty-ump is now in final boarding process," says the loudspeaker with a voice like Gabriel's trumpet (I don't think I like that word "final". It sounds so — well, final).

The planes were moored alongside the passenger decks, gleaming in the morning sun. Gourmet luncheons were hoisted in to be eaten halfway to New York.

Stewardesses arrived in pairs. They wore scarfs over their uniform hats (To keep the wind from blowing their hair, dear boy. Ask questions or you'll never get the story).

Stewardesses are militant Mss these days of freedom. A whole bunch of them complained when ads appeared.

"We Hustle Our Bustles For Open End Airline"

The stewardess is a wonder of our times. She pours the coffee for the inside passenger in a three-seat stretch. Serves the whole cabin on a one-hour jump. Mixes martinis. Runs the movie. Hangs the coats — she would like to hang the passenger ("How many hangers do they think we have room for?")

The high life is better for her. And we fly through the air with the greatest of ease.

Anyway, the flying angels are burned up over sexy advertising. Protests have been made in Washington. And a few foxy chicks have made the TV news shows.

"We do responsible work and refuse to be treated as sex objects."

Not so in earlier days when I was spilling martinis in bumpy piston engine jobs.

Stewardesses were new. When our sugar walked down the aisle, strong men mopped their foreheads.

Stewardesses were rare birds in those innocent days of up-she-goes, down-she-goes and the lunch flying over the passenger ahead of us.

The stewardess was invented by W. A. Patterson of United Air. (Though purists say it was really a vice president.)

There are some who say the stewardess came with Wilbur and Orville Wright — Ms. Kitty Hawk.

("This is going to be a short flight, Kitty," said Orville. "So never mind starting the movie.")

The first stewardesses who flew for Mr. Patterson were registered nurses. Licensed to administer aspirin or set a leg. Flying was a dicey thing. It didn't hurt to have a medic aboard.

When there weren't enough nurses to go around, the airlines simply put on girls.

Mostly men fly on the airlines. This naturally brought some sex into the business. I don't see how they're going to get it out. No matter how much they protest.

A cat can look at a queen, as the saying goes. If the queen looks queenly enough, the cat is going to be impressed.

While stewardesses were new, I interviewed a lot of them. I learned about company policies: Why all stewardesses must wear girdles whether they need them or not. ("But we can't take them off our income tax.")

How many miles they walked — the long distance runners.

How soon they got married and to whom. (About two years. The boy next door.)

They looked like sex objects to me. But that's all changed. I want to make that perfectly clear.

'The Hair Of Harold Roux'

"When a man tries himself he constructs a scaffold and a throne."

...and somehow, he is, honestly, at home with both. Or so it appears to Aaron Benham, the protagonist in Thomas Williams' superb new novel, "The Hair of Harold Roux" (Random House).

As Benham sees it, the edifice a man constructs when judging himself is the ultimate symbol for an existence characterized by paradox. An existence that is short, nasty and brutish — made all the more painful by those occasional moments in which the soft caress of the ideal, the beautiful, supercedes the ugly clout of reality.

"Where does delusion end and reality begin as our various delusions start to mesh?" he asks. "The connection is made, and madness, as always, seems dominant."

In "The Hair of Harold Roux," author Williams — whose previous works have received their share of honors, including a nomination for the National Book Award — has expertly interwoven the threads of several different stories. And, together, they comprise a totality that speaks well for this writer's immense talent.

In the beginning, there is Aaron Benham, a writer and college professor, whose life we join at its mid-point. Married, the father of two children, Benham is, basically, a soft touch. The type of person to whom others come for counsel, guidance.

They call him at all hours — mothers whose college-age offspring disappear without word into the subculture of drugs; the apprehensive wife of a faculty colleague who is tormented by the Publish or Perish Syndrome, who despondently fritters away the time allotted him for work on his doctoral dissertation.

And he answers their calls for help, half-heartedly resenting their intrusions — because he hasn't the answers: "... he should get himself together and simply tell George to do his work or get out, and tell Mark Rasmussen that his despair is the hurt ego of a self-indulgent little boy, that the system of our planet is rape and murder, not love and reason, that he is a fool weeping for Eden."

In the midst of this, we enter the world of Allard Benson and Harold Roux — characters in a novel that is undergoing a painful birth at the hands of writer, Benham.

Allard Benson. Aaron Benham. The similarity between those names is no accident. Benson is young Aaron Benham — just out of the Army, going to college, rejoicing in his youth, only beginning to realize that the world is somewhat out of joint:

"... he believes that one human being should not cause pain in another, and ... whenever he himself sins against this catchall bit of orthodoxy he is clearly aware of it. Whatever it is that he has done is printed coldly and permanently on his soul. This is Allard Benson's voice, of course, masking certain things in an unfortunate flippancy."

The ideal, the illusory, represented by Mary, the girl Allard thinks he loves; and Harold, a meek, saintlike character who is in the world but not of it ... who hides his baldness under a hairpiece, and physically retreats into a quaint world of illusion when the going gets too rough.

The reality, represented by Allard and his inevitable betrayal of them both; the potential violence he feels always lurking somewhere beneath the surface of his cool-headed existence.

These images come back to haunt him as Benham fitfully tries to write his book, to sort out his muddled life.

If only he could rely on a happy ending — like the one which concludes the enchanting children's tale included within Williams' larger narrative.

But Benham realizes that is not to be. And the crushing futility of it all envelops him: "If one is to die, why not now? That question has never been properly answered."

Thomas Williams is a man with a singular talent in a field where dime-a-dozen novels are the common fare.

His book is meaty, profound, never hackneyed (though it could have been). In shimmering, often tortured phrases, he gives form and substance to feelings universal in their appeal.

"The Hair Of Harold Roux" is the type of book that you hope will never end (what a refreshing change!), by an artist who quietly, firmly demonstrates that he knows what he is about.

Opening lead - king of clubs.

Good defense is mostly a matter of visualizing declarer's hand and utilizing this knowledge to obtain the best possible result.

Consider this deal where West leads the king of clubs, on which East plays the queen. It is a widely accepted convention that the queen is not played in this situation unless it is accompanied by the jack.

West therefore plays a low club at trick two, confident that East will either ruff or play the jack.

When East wins with the jack, he is faced with the crucial problem of what to play next, but there are many clues to guide him to the proper return. Most of these clues come from the bidding.

He knows that West must have five clubs for his overall, which means that South has no more clubs.

He likewise knows that South bid diamonds ahead of spades, thus indicating longer diamonds than spades and hence a 4-2-5-2 distribution. (If South had only one heart, West would have bid a heart instead of two clubs.)

So, by putting these inferences together, East concludes that a club continuation would be futile and that a heart shift is necessary. He therefore plays the deuce of hearts at trick three.

The shift strikes pay dirt when West cashes the A-Q to put the contract down one. Actually, West has a problem of whether to try to cash the queen hearts — his fourth best heart — of hearts or ace of clubs — after indicates that South started capturing South's king of hearts with two hearts. Hence West with the ace — but it is an easy plays the queen of hearts and so problem to solve. defeats the contract.

East's lead of the deuce of (c) King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Child Raising

'Help Your Child Develop A Rich Imagination'

Editor's note — One of a series excerpted from the book, Raising Children In A Difficult Time, by Dr. Benjamin Spock.

It's good, I think, for children to develop a rich imagination. This will give them pleasure all their lives — in being able to lose themselves in books, plays, travel, and daydreams.

On the practical side, people who have imagination can go further in most occupations. This is particularly true, of course, of those in the highly creative professions, such as novelists, poets, dramatists, painters, fashion designers. But it's also true in advertising, science, medicine, manufacturing.

To put it the other way around, the person who is strictly literal-minded has a limited usefulness to the world and a limited capacity for joy.

In the second year of life even such simple play activities as putting one block on top of another, looking at picture books, tending dolls, pushing toy cars around on the floor, help to develop imagination. Between 2 and 5 years, children's play will become progressively more complex if they have anything at all to work with.

Some parents assume that the more expensive and elaborate the toy, the better it is for children. This is not often true. It is the simple playthings and play materials that give the widest scope to children's creativity.

It's impossible, I think, to exaggerate the importance of reading aloud to children from the age of 2 until they can read enjoyably to themselves — which doesn't come until several years after they have begun the process of learning to read. Stories that are quite simple can be fascinating to young children, so don't look for books that would intrigue you. Consult a librarian or bookseller who deals in children's books if you haven't had experience. There is a great wealth of books these days for children.

It's not necessary to get into stories that are scary or violent in order to interest and stimulate children, and I think it is better to avoid them altogether. It's wise to read slowly to young children and allow them time to ask questions. In other words, they need the opportunity to digest each part of the story and to bend it to their own needs.

One of the valuable by-products of reading regularly to young children is the craving they develop to learn to read for themselves. We adults who have already learned this skill readily assume that the desire is present in every child. But it isn't. Teachers of deprived children who've never been read to may have to cope with a total absence motivation at first, which makes the job difficult and slow.

What about the effect of television on the development of the imagination? Parents who grew up in pre-television days and who were great readers of classical literature have been suspicious of television. They feel that the stories and commercials are mostly trash and that having a story presented visually in full detail induces passivity in the viewers and relieves them of any necessity to use their own imaginations.

'... the person who is strictly literal-minded has a limited usefulness to the world and a limited capacity for joy.'

Educators do not generally agree with this judgment. They believe that the over-all effect of television has been to foster children's imagination, intelligence, and curiosity, especially children from families that provide only an average or less-than-average amount of intellectual and cultural stimulations. In particular, the experts point to the way in which children go to libraries to read about topics that have been featured on television.

But I want to say quickly that I don't mean I'd recommend large doses of just any kind of television. I believe programs of violence and brutality are harmful to children, especially young children, and should be forbidden. I also believe children shouldn't be allowed to sit in front of even good television fare all day and all evening. They should be shooed out of the house — or at least away from the set for a major part of their leisure (nonschool) hours in order to exercise their imaginations actively and creatively in play, to practice and enjoy sociability with their friends, and to give their bodies some exercise.

Then there are the children who, without encouragement from parents, create an imaginary companion who seems ever-present and more real than the ordinary people around them. (This is quantitatively different from the common situation of the small child who occasionally mentions — in a frankly make-believe spirit — an unreal friend.) The basic causes for this kind of situation may be subtle and hard to determine. But certain factors can be fairly clear.

When the imaginary companion is always doing the naughty things, the real children have somehow to believe that they would lose entirely their parents' love and their own self-respect if they carried out or even admitted these forbidden impulses.

It would be wise in these cases for the parents to think over their moralizing and disapproval, to see if it has been too severe. In any case, I think they should tell such children from time to time in a sympathetic, affectionate manner that they sometimes want to be naughty — as all children do, occasionally — and that the parents try to help them to be mostly good. This is to ease these children's sense of guilt and let them see themselves a bit more realistically.

When a child's imaginary companion is simply someone to have a good time with, she or he may need more opportunities to play with other real children or some help in learning how to get along with them.

I think it's sensible for the parents of children who constantly refer to an imaginary companion to steer a middle course, not acting as if they believed in the reality of the companion, but on the other hand not ridiculing or arguing with their children. To act as if they believed, to play the children's game, will further weaken their somewhat shaky sense of reality and lead them away from a real solution to whatever their underlying problems are.

To ridicule or argue pushes children away from their parents and intensifies their need for solace through imagination. The middle course is for the parents to listen in an amused but sympathetic manner, as if to show their appreciation of the children's storytelling ability. But now and then they can indicate in a casual way that they realize the companion is imaginary.

One of the most important everyday jobs that parents have to take on as a matter of course is to teach their children — gradually over the months and years — to distinguish between fantasy and fact. Otherwise children remain immature in some respects.

The job of helping a child to understand reality is one that lasts right up to maturity. One way in which most adolescents differ from adults is that they are so strongly dominated by certain needs — to be accepted by their peers, to be loved by someone of the opposite sex, to appear experienced and worldly that they impatiently brush aside the realities that threaten to get in the way of the value of certain conversations, the value of being cautious at times, the value of not showing one's hand too soon.

So there are two balances to aim for: to encourage your children to develop enough pleasurable imagination to enrich their real life, but not so much that they prefer to live mainly in a fantasy world; at the same time to encourage them to learn, all through childhood, to be more and more realistic in recognizing their own motives, their responsibilities and their imperfections.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY The letter from the 21-year-old girl who thinks she can hold a man by going to bed with him must have been written by my daughter. That's HER problem.

I can't communicate with her. She resents my advice. The first time she goes out with a man she goes to bed with him. I know it's true because I hear her telling her girl friend about it. (Could she be oversexed?) She lives at home, but meets her dates somewhere else and is dropped off at the corner.

She is a beautiful girl but she's never had a steady boyfriend, which is what she wants.

Once I suggested that she see a psychiatrist but she refused. Abby, you always recommend "therapy." Please tell me what a therapist could do for her and I'll get her to one if I have to drag her there.

HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: A therapist will try to help her to understand the reason for her behavior. (Promiscuous people are usually very insecure and have a low opinion of themselves.) A therapist will try to help her build her self-esteem so she can develop better and more lasting relationships.

Don't "drag" your daughter to a therapist. Psychotherapy, unlike castor oil, which will work no matter how you get it down, is useless when forced on an uncooperative patient.

10% Return Rate Sought By United Telephone Co.

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

United Telephone Co. of the West Wednesday told the Nebraska Public Service Commission that the smaller independent phone companies need a higher rate of return in order to maintain service and keep investors.

J. D. Brewer, vice president of finance for United, said, "I feel a return on the rate base in excess of 10% is required."

To finance that, Brewer said a $260,000 to $270,000 annual increase in subscriber rates would be necessary.

Exceeded Rate

United, which has 30,000 phones in the Scottsbluff region, appeared before the commission in response to a show cause order issued when the commission determined United had exceeded its allowed rate of return for 1973.

In its last rate case, United was allowed an 8.25% rate of return on total capital. For 1973, the commission estimated United experienced a 9.45% return. If it wishes, the commission can order a refund or rate reduction to subscribers to offset the excess earnings.

United is one of three telephone companies which have been ordered to appear before the commission to explain excess earnings. The others are General Telephone Co. of the Midwest, which serves the Columbus and Kearney regions, and Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Greater Fluctuation

Brewer said the smaller firms like United need a rate of return higher than that allowed the Bell System, because their annual rates of return are subject to greater fluctuation.

For instance, he said if a tornado ripped through Scottsbluff and the North Platte River valley, or if the sugar beet crop failed, United's rate of return on its Nebraska operation would suffer.

David C. Baker of Scottsbluff, general manager, said the higher rate of return is needed to help with United's "accelerated construction program."

Good Service

Baker said United is presently providing good service. He said the firm's complaint rate is 1/2 complaint per 1,000 phones. For the last 5 1/2 years, he said only 26 complaints have been filed with the commission concerning United's service.

The commission will act on the matter later.

Injured Girl Dies After Sunday Crash

Minutaire (AP) — A 16-year-old Bayard girl died in a Denver hospital Wednesday of injuries suffered in a one-car accident on a county road five miles east and two miles south of Minutaire Sunday night.

The girl was Linda Lockman, one of six members of a family injured in the mishap.

Officers said the car was driven by John Takuski, identified as the girl's father. Takuski, his wife and their three sons were injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Takuski remained hospitalized in Scottsbluff today. The three sons were released from the hospital Monday.

Officers said the car failed to make a turn at a T-intersection and slammed into the ditch of a bank.

The death raised Nebraska's 1974 traffic fatality toll to 182, compared with 204 at this time last year.

Sprinkles Help Cool Nebraska

A slight letup in the hot dry weather over southeastern Nebraska came Wednesday with the arrival of light scattered showers.

Wahoo's .28 topped eastern reports to the National Weather Service. Other rainfall received included Superior .15, Omaha (92nd and Q St.) .17, Fairbury .10, Decatur .05, and Lincoln .01.

In western Nebraska Sidney received .32, Scottsbluff .09, and Chadron .01.

Although the meager amounts were welcome, the sprinkles were far from breaking the current drought.

Temperatures across the state Wednesday climbed as high as 100 degrees at Grand Island, 99 at McCook and Hastings, and 98 at Beatrice and Kearney.

OPPD Man Electrocuted

Elmwood (AP) — Michael Thoms, 29, of Weeping Water, an Omaha Public Power District employe, was electrocuted Wednesday while changing a transformer on the Chester Bornemeier farm 2 1/2 miles northeast of Elmwood.

Thoms was one of two men working at the scene.

Officials said Thoms apparently came in contact with a live wire. The Weeping Water Rescue Squad was unsuccessful in attempts to revive Thoms. A doctor pronounced him dead at the scene.

Metropolitan Faces Financial Bind

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The president of the Metropolitan Technical Community College said Wednesday unless additional state support is received by the second week of January, the college could find itself in a serious financial bind.

Marm Harris, who heads the newly merged college area, told Gov. J. James Exon and other administration officials the area "might have cash flow problems in December, if we don't let something slip."

High Court Ruling

Harris said financing hurdles raised by a recent State Supreme Court decision pose a particular problem for his area which serves the Omaha region because it, unlike the other five areas, is "starting from scratch."

Equipment must be bought, faculty hired and buildings remodeled, he said.

Harris said the court's ban on the one mill property tax support for the system fell especially hard on the Metropolitan Technical Community College Area. Data provided indicated Metropolitan relies more on the one mill than any of the other areas. Some 37% of the area's operating budget is state assistance.

Could Get By

Still, Harris apparently went along with other representatives of the technical colleges who indicated they could get by through January without a special session of the Legislature if state assistance payments are made early.

He said he did not advocate a special session to resolve the funding problems. He said his area board was scheduled to discuss the subject Wednesday night.

As a part of Metropolitan's belt-tightening, Harris said 20 new faculty members who would have been hired in July will now be hired in August and September.

With the possible exception of Metropolitan, Arlo Wirth of Hartington, chairman of the State Board of Technical Community Colleges, said accelerated state funding "should be enough . . . to get through January and into February."

The court ruling cost the areas $6 million, which will probably have to be made up by the Legislature. The state's share totals $10 million.

Despite the legal problems, Wirth said no potential student should hesitate to enroll in a technical community college. "All of the schools will be operating," Wirth said.

Exon said he will make a final decision on whether to call a special session within the next two days. He said he has seen little support for a special session and added that state senators seem to be unanimous in opposition to a special session.

Long-Range Answers

Wirth said a special committee of state board members is looking at possible long-range solutions for suggestion to the Legislature.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Ralph Gillan said one solution may be to allow counties to impose a variable mill levy instead of a flat one mill everywhere.

Merrick County Inmate Gives His Account

Columbus (AP) — An Iowa man involved in a disturbance Monday at the Merrick County Jail in Central City was found innocent of escaping from the Platte County Jail in the 21st Judicial District Court in Columbus Wednesday.

Wayne Sowle, 19, waived extradition to Ottumwa, Iowa, and was to be transported to Council Bluffs, Iowa, and turned over to Iowa authorities immediately after the jury trial.

Before leaving the court, Sowle handed newsmen a statement concerning the Merrick County Jail incident. In the statement, Sowle contended that what Merrick County Sheriff Dan Schneiderheinz termed a "rumble" was brought on by threats to the prisoners from the sheriff.

Sowle said that, "on that eventful Monday, there were four prisoners in the cellblock. Sunday, the sheriff brought in a human skull that had been found in a river and said to the prisoners, 'that may be you that we find next year.' A little while later he came back in and said, 'hell, it may be all of you'."

Sowle related that Schneiderheinz then told the prisoners, "There's 20 taxpayers out here that want my keys." Three of the prisoners (I was locked in my cell) barricaded the door to stop the mob." Sowle said on Monday morning the sheriff and eight men stormed the three prisoners in the cellblock.

Schneiderheinz said Tuesday that the prisoners had barricaded themselves in the jail Monday, using tables and chairs to block the doorway, then they tore out lighting fixtures, broke tables and chairs and tried to break the windows out of one side of the jail. The sheriff did not report any injuries.

Sowle had been charged with escaping from the Platte County Jail in Columbus last Oct. 9. He was being held at that time on charges of robbery with aggravation in Ottumwa, Iowa.

He recently was arrested in Memphis, Tenn., and was brought to Columbus to face trial on the escape charge. He was transferred to the Merrick County Jail after an incident in Columbus where prisoners clogged up the drains in the Platte County Jail and flooded the courthouse.

Candidates Against Food Tax

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP) — Nebraska Republican gubernatorial candidate Richard Marvel of Hastings and his running mate, Mrs. Anne Batchelder of Omaha, brought their campaign to a supermarket here Wednesday to check on Iowa's new taxless grocery system.

taxed at three per cent, from the rest of the groceries.

Iowa's repeal of the sales tax on grocery items sailed through the 1974 state legislature, and went into effect July 1.

In Nebraska, residents are now allowed to deduct $13 per family member from the state income taxes as a rebate for the sales tax paid on food items.

Marvel and Mrs. Batchelder compared the prices in Safeway stores in Omaha and here, then purchased 54 gallons of milk here to demonstrate the loss in buying power from one side of the river to the other.

Omaha and other Nebraska cities also have city sales taxes on food items.

Marvel said the tax break on food items now given Iowans would add up to about $72.80 in annual savings for a Nebraska family of four.

The milk purchased by the two Republicans represent the purchasing power of that savings, and was then donated to Children's Memorial Hospital in Omaha.

Most store managers here say the repeal of the sales tax on food has not drawn a flock of Omahans across the river, but that there have been a few driving the extra distance to shop.

Rice Attorneys Will Seek Bail

By The Associated Press
"At the appropriate time" attorneys will seek bail for David Rice, convicted of first-degree murder in the 1970 booby-trap slaying of an Omaha policeman.

On Monday, a federal judge ruled that Rice must be released from the Nebraska Penal Complex or given a new trial because evidence used to obtain his conviction was taken in an illegal search.

An attorney for Rice, David Herzog of Omaha, said in a telephone interview, "I will file a motion for bail at the appropriate time."

Herzog declined to comment on whether the request from bail would be present to U. S. District Court Judge Warren K. Urborn in the immediate future.

"I can only say that at the appropriate time, we will make a motion for bail," Herzog said. "I don't know if that will be tomorrow or next week or when."

The Nebraska Attorney General's office will appeal Urborn's decision to the 8th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis.

That court could in turn uphold, reverse or modify Urborn's decision.

If Urborn's decision is upheld, the state could ask the U. S. Supreme Court to review the decision.

Omaha Mayor Told To Publish Report

Omaha (AP) — The city council has instructed Mayor Edward Zorinsky to publish a full report on investigations of last month's police shootout with a gunman.

The vote was 6-1, with Jerry Hassett dissenting.

Councilman Monte Taylor informally asked the mayor for such a report earlier Tuesday, saying: "I don't want to create an incident with the mayor, but we were rebuffed I'm taking the only course I know."

Taylor introduced the resolution to the council.

Race Study Conducted In Omaha

Omaha (AP) — Two agents from the Community Relations Service of the U. S. Justice Department have been here for two days studying racial relations.

The two men, Milton Lewis and Pascual Marquez, from the central region office in Kansas City, Mo., said their study does not stem from recent shooting incidents that have left two black men dead and another wounded.

The two men made the trip here at the request of the Greater Omaha Area Chamber of Commerce and the Mid-City Business and Professional Association, according to the Lewis.

Lewis said his group's primary goal is to promote better relations between racial groups by encouraging the involvement of local governmental officials and community leaders.

Contractors, Bricklayers Agree; Union Pay Up 11%

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—The Omaha Building Contractors Employers Association and the Bricklayers Union Local 1 have reached agreement on a new three-year contract that immediately raises the union's top pay by 11 per cent.

Dean Kratz, attorney for the contractors, said the agreement calls for an immediate 95-cent-an-hour increase in wages and fringe benefits. The raise brings top pay to $9.62 1/2 per hour.

No further meetings are scheduled between the contractors and striking Cement Finishers Local 528, which has

3 Changes Proposed In Omaha

Omaha (AP) — Three more Omaha city charter proposals, all from the Charter Review Commission, will go before the voters in November.

The city council agreed Tuesday to submit proposals that would:

—Allow the council, on the recommendation of the mayor, to pass ordinances transferring functions from one city department to another.

—Increase the number of persons on the planning board from five to seven and make it mandatory that one member live out-

Rice was 23 at the time of the Aug. 17, 1970 incident in which officer Larry Minard died.

Minard was among eight policemen who entered a vacant home in response to an anonymous telephone call.

A suit case containing dynamite exploded in the home, and Minard was killed. The seven other officers were injured.

Five days later, police searched Rice's residence, and found particles of dynamite in his clothing and that of a companion, Edward Poundexter. Both were convicted and sentenced to life terms.

Urborn ruled the search was illegal because the warrant was issued without probable cause.

The Rice conviction had previously been upheld by the Nebraska Supreme Court.

Urborn said Rice "must be released from custody or granted a new trial free from the tainted evidence."

Urborn ordered that Rice be released "unless within 90 days of the date of this order (July 5) or, if an appeal is taken, 90 days after the decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the 8th District, whichever is later, the state of Nebraska retires," Rice.

Urborn could set one of three kinds of bail for Rice: personal recognizance, corporate surety (put up by a bail bondsman) or property bond (personal or real property is given as collateral).

The councilman said there have been many innuendos of suspected criminal conduct by police, "but a notable absence of hard facts."

Taylor said petitions are being circulated to call a federal grand jury to investigate the June 5-6 shootout in which Patrolman Paul Nields and the gunman, Elza Carr Jr., were killed. Eight other policemen were wounded.

Taylor said he couldn't understand why Zorinsky signed the petition for the grand jury, but Zorinsky replied: "We have nothing to hide in city government."

The mayor said he doesn't think a grand jury would find any criminal liability by policemen and that the county attorney's office has reviewed the shooting of Carr and didn't file charges.

Funds Wanted To Hire Police

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha City Council has authorized the city's police department to apply for a federal grant of nearly $891,000 from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

Should the request be approved, the money would be used to hire 60 new patrolmen.

Police Chief Richard Andersen said that despite recent reports of a high attrition rate in the department, he expected to have enough recruits to fill the 60 new jobs later this year.

If the grant is approved, the city's share of the program would total only $67,920.

Trap Range Donated To Nebraska Scout Camp

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Humboldt — Several hundred youths are being introduced to a new sport this summer at the Cornhusker Boy Scout Reservation, thanks to a unique gift.

An official-sized trap range has been built in memory of E. J. Morehead of Falls City with some $2,000 donated by his widow. Several times a state champion, he was inducted into the Nebraska Trapshooting Hall of Fame in 1972, shortly before his death.

"Camp officials had talked of such a layout for years, and when Mrs. Morehead was so informed she agreed this would be a fitting tribute for her husband," said Gene Hulbert, resident manager of the 890-acre reservation and summer camp. "A 20-gauge range was built to official specifications and already has become one of our most popular activities."

Dedication is scheduled Tuesday evening, July 16, by the council executive board. Also invited are representatives of the Falls City Rifle and Pistol Club, which donated two shotguns.

Some 750 scouts will have tried the new range by the time summer encampment breaks up at the end of July.

Since June 7, the camp has been hosting troops from virtually all parts of southeast Nebraska in one-week sessions.

The number of boys has gradually diminished in recent years, however, to the point that council officials are somewhat concerned. Hulbert said an additional 200 to 300 youths might have come except for their participation in high-adventure camping trips to remote areas. In the face of such competition, the Cornhusker camp has upgraded its staff through higher pay and careful selection. The result is, according to Hulbert, "our best qualified staff ever and one of the tops in the country."

For example, the only members who are not Eagle scouts are three women who are continuing the camp's pioneering in the use of women counselors.

They are Janette Shaver of Albion, a Wayne State student, and Sharon Duerfeldt of Falls City and Peggy Kretzels of Nebraska City, both of Peru State.

Eight of the 21 staff members are college students or recent graduates, including the two commissioners, Richard Westling and Jim Underhill of Lincoln.

Also noteworthy is that Hulbert and five of his directors are graduates of a national camp school.

"Besides attending a national school, four of the five were at the head of their class," said Hulbert, sounding like a proud father. Since he is a candidate for Richardson county treasurer, this may be his last summer at the camp.

Besides Westling and Underhill, the other national graduates are Gordon Thompson, field sport director, Bruce Droge, nature-ecology, and Tim Lommason, aquatics. The camp also has a qualified chaplain — Brian Casey of Falls City, a seminary student.

Also of significance are some $7,000 in improvements to the camp swimming pool, mainly in its filter system. A reserve SeaBees unit recently added some finishing touches to the camp boat house and picnic shelter.

Nebraska Wheat Harvest Outruns Fuel Monitoring

Scottsbluff, Neb. (AP) — A Federal Energy Administration official said Tuesday that the Nebraska wheat harvest has outpaced a 26-foot communication van used to move ahead of the wheat harvest in an attempt to ensure adequate fuel supplies.

Bul Bennett said the operator of the van has switched to a radio-equipped station wagon and has abandoned the van in Kansas.

Bennett toured Scotts Bluff County Tuesday checking with agricultural fuel suppliers and said the supply was adequate for the harvest.

Bennett said that in monitoring the fuel supply he has encountered only minor problems and those were only a matter of bringing the machine operator together with a supplier.

Bennett said the station wagon operator preceding the wheat harvest is authorized to order fuel delivered to problem areas. He said this assures harvesters and has resulted in an adequate equipment supply for the harvest.

Bennett estimates that Nebraska's wheat harvest is about 75 per cent complete.

An invitation was also issued to Third District congressional candidates Mrs. Haven Smith and Wayne Ziebarth to debate at an Oct. 8 meeting.

All-Star Game Canceled

Delaying Tactic Used

The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission's seven-man board of commissioners deferred action last month on a new setup which would have rid the monthly board meetings of a major headache.

The delaying tactic was pinned to a proposed Nebraska Parks and Wildlife Trust. The formation of the new Trust would permit the following:

"The Trust can buy, sell or trade tangible and intangible gifts, something a government agency cannot do. This means it can accept all kinds of gifts and dispose of them in any way it sees fit, subject to any special conditions of the donor.

"The Trust can take options on land, borrow money, and perform other functions related to eventual purchase of parks and wildlife lands and/or facilities.

"The Trust can accept conditional gifts of land or other assets that a public agency cannot accept. Stocks, bonds, revenues from properties and other girls can be accepted and managed by the Trust."

Political Process Eliminated

The summation of benefits toward such a Trust would be the elimination of most of the political problems which now handcuff the Game and Parks Commission.

For example, during the past month's meeting, two plots of land, both large Sandhill area ranches, were offered to the Commission at "dirt cheap" prices. Both might be of substantial future benefit as wildlife areas, potential fish hatchery sites, parks, nature trail areas, etc.

It took the better part of the day for the seven commissioners to discuss possibilities for purchasing all or portions of one of the ranches. Just one.

All the legal questions were hashed and rehashed. All the potential benefits were discussed likewise. And no action was taken, nor could it have been taken at that one meeting.

As the Trust fact sheet puts it, "The Trust can operate with more flexibility than a governmental agency. Flexibility in the purchase, sale and management of properties can accomplish in days what it now takes the State years to do through normal budgeting procedures."

Aid to Skimpy Budget

And the way the Commission has been handled in the past through state budgeting, the Trust can only provide a boost in permitting the purchase of lands of value for future purchase by the state. The goodies don't slip away.

Although it was a little before my time in Nebraska (I'm a native Iowan), Mel Steen, hard-hitting former director of the Game Commission, made a number of "influential" people around the state uneasy and upset by his rapid-buying-of-land techniques. Now they wish he'd been blessed with more money.

The Trust appears to be the answer to budget handcuffing which forces the Commission to turn its back on likely looking promised lands, equipment, stocks or anything else which could prove beneficial. It can raise its own money or take out a loan.

Private, but qualified, citizens and Willard Barbee, current director of the Commission, would serve on the Trust board. They would make the decisions. No state monies directly involved in the non-profit organization.

The Trust foundation appears to be completely legal as other states have initiated like Trusts and found them successful and extremely useful.

But the seven-man board of commissioners wanted to take more time to look at and discuss this matter. That's what the Trust is going to be aiming to eliminate when it comes to getting the goodies for future state use.

CHICAGO (UPI) — A strike by the National Football League Players Association forced cancellation Wednesday of the College All-Star game against the world champion Miami Dolphins.

The NFLPA pledged to donate half the money the July 26 classic would have raised for charity. A spokesman for NFL owners promptly charged the striking pro players with an "irresponsible attack on the traditions of football."

It marked the first time the midsummer game — traditionally the kickoff of the football season — will not be played since its inception 40 years ago in 1934.

"It is with extreme reluctance that the Chicago Tribune Charities Inc. announces the cancellation of the 41st annual College All-Star football game," Cooper Rollow, Tribune sports editor and president of Tribune Charities, told a news conference.

"Tribune Charities, which already has incurred considerable expense preparing for the game, cannot continue plans when the status of the game remains uncertain," Rollow said.

"We don't want to be the ones to lay the blame on anyone," he said. He said the charity would continue its neutral stance in the dispute.

Rollow said all the All Stars would be sent home at the charity's expense and would be paid a per diem for their expenses in addition to their hotel and meals.

Cancellation of the game, he said, represented a substantial loss of "many thousands of dollars" for the charity.

He said the NFLPA had offered to donate half of what the annual charity game raised last year — which would come to about $100,000 — and said the strikers' offer had been relayed to the league, though the charity made no request that the league match the NFLPA offer.

NFLPA President Bill Curry said the association had made an "unqualified offer" to come up with the money, noting that "half the responsibility for the cancellation is on us." He said the pro players could raise the money through banquets, luncheons and other such fund-raising events.

"We know where the money is coming from. We will raise the money," Curry told newsmen.

All-star coach John McKay, of Southern California, said it was regrettable that the game was canceled, but that it was "one of those things that happen — and maybe should have happened."

"I don't think anybody's responsible," he said. "Certainly the players' aren't to blame. The players were presented the situation, they were talked to by both sides, and they made their decisions."

Shortly after the cancellation was announced, Wellington Mara, president of the New York Giants and chairman of the management council executive committee, charged the NFLPA with attacking the traditions of football.

Mara charged that the game was canceled "not because it had an effect on the National Football League labor problems, because it had none — but solely because it happened to stand in the way of the union leadership's drive for power."

He charged the union had denied 50 all-stars the experience of playing in the classic and denied Tribune charities the freedom to continue donations to worthy causes.

"I am indignant at the audacity of this union and appalled that it is now so willing to strike out at anyone or anything in its path and I am disappointed in the willingness of its members to allow such tactics," Mara said.

Rollow said the annual charity game would be resumed next year.

Only seven pros managed to match or better the par of 35-36-71.

Player, the reigning Masters champion and with Nicklaus the only active player to have won all the big four titles, appeared set to take the undisputed lead when he arrived four-under at the 17th tee. But he found two bunkers, took four to reach the green and took a double bogey.

The 37-year-old South African had four birdies in his outward half of 31. He made two at the par 3 first, fifth and ninth and got a four at the par 5 sixth by holing putts from seven to 10 feet.

"I played a perfect round of golf today in the conditions," Player said, "especially when you consider my card included a double bogey."

Morgan, a 30-year-old schoolmaster turned pro golfer, had a trio of birdies from the 11th but dropped a stroke with a bogey at the 14th.

An unknown, as his 1974 winnings of $3,600 would indicate, Morgan gained unwanted headlines during the 1968 Open at Carnoustie, his pro debut, when he was bitten by a rat. "I shot a 92 that day and wanted to slink out of town," he recalled.

British Open Lead Knotted

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (UPI) — South African Gary Player and an unlikely British club pro, John Morgan, shot opening round 69s Wednesday to lead the British Open Golf Championship when all around them players were failing to master the wind and the big American ball.

With the wind blowing from the southwest in the morning and switching 90 degrees in the afternoon, Royal Lytham's trap-filled 6,822-yards proved too much of a test for the field of 154 who were obliged to play the big American ball — the first time this has been compulsory in the world's oldest championship.

The American ball measures 1.68 inches against the 1.62 of the British.

Only 12 pros managed to match or better the par of 35-36-71.

Lee Trevino, a pre-tournament favorite along with Player and Jack Nicklaus, both two-time winners like himself, was one of those to fail the test even though he is noted for his wind play. He shot a 79 and said, "I need a rest."

Defending champion Tom Weiskopf and Johnny Miller, last year's U.S. Open winner, were among four men to register over 72s and trail Danny Edwards of Oklahoma, last year's leading amateur, and South Africa's Bobby Cole who shot 70s. Hubie Green, Britain's Peter Oosterhuis and John O'Leary of Ireland had even par 71s.

Nicklaus was in a large group which included Ben Crenshaw and Ron Cerrudo, on 74.

Harris Overtakes Bahensky

By RANDY EICKHOFF
Star Sports Writer

Five birdies and continuous steady play on the other 13 holes gave Steve Harris a 36-33-69 at Pioneer's Golf Course Wednesday and the second round lead in the four-day Men's City Golf Championships.

Harris took the one-stroke lead over first-day leader Dan Bahensky after trailing by four following the opening day round at Hillcrest Country Club.

But still, Bahensky, the 1972 champion, refused to worry after posting his 74, gathered on nines of 39-35.

"I'm pretty satisfied with my round today," the former University of Nebraska golfer said. "I wouldn't take a single shot over."

But putting? That's a different matter. Bahensky took 34 putts over the 6,308-yard course — at least four more than he figured he should.

"These are pretty small greens so you should take between 29 and 30 putts maximum on them," he offered. "I was way off that today. I missed one from two feet out."

Oddly enough, it was the same order of courses, Hillcrest, Pioneer's, Holmes and Lincoln Country Club, that Bahensky played when he first captured the crown in 1972. That year, however, he played the first two 74-70 while this year he went 70-74.

That was also the same year that Bahensky was part of the first sudden-death playoff in the tournament, winning it on the first extra hole.

"I don't think it'll be like that this year, but you can never tell what will happen out there," he said. "I'm not particularly worried, however, because I am playing steady. If I wasn't then..." he shrugged.

While Harris was collecting his pars and birdies, Bahensky bogeyed three holes on the front nine, saving par on six, and played the backside in even par.

"I don't know about tomorrow (Thursday)," Bahensky said. "I've heard the fairways and greens are pretty hard (at Holmes), but the course is longer than here and that should favor me. I'll get to hit my long irons there."

But those long iron shots do not mean that Harris is out of

Ace For Meyer

Nebraska's Attorney General, Clarence Meyer, shot a hole-in-one Wednesday at Hillcrest Country Club using a four iron on the 157-yard No. 12 hole with Toral Duckett, Harvey Gates and Clem Gaughan witnessing the event.

Iowa Slams Omaha

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—The Iowa Oaks punished four Omaha pitchers with 28 hits and devastated Omaha 23-5 Wednesday.

The Oaks fell five runs short of the American Association single-game scoring record and four short of tying the hit mark.

The Oaks actually got the runs against three pitchers and an infielder.

Jos Martinez, who refused Tuesday to report to Pittsburgh in a trade for Kurt Bevacqua, appeared on the mound during the final four innings for the first pitching stint of his 15-year career.

The utility infielder-turned pitcher retired the Oaks in order in the sixth, the first time they had been set down, but in the seventh the first eight Oaks hit safely, including home runs by Joe Talley, Lamar Johnson and Leon Brown.

Stan Perzanowski pitched shutout ball for seven innings and lifted his record to 8-3. It was his eighth straight triumph over Omaha in two years.

Bluegill Trolling Scores

By TOM VINT
Outdoor Writer

Malcolm — Panfish are uncommonly courteous for the avid angler looking for a little action during "dog days" of fishing. But who ever heard of trolling for bluegill?

Don't knock it until you've tried it!

The idea never really struck home for most local anglers until a crew of tackle testers for Lindy Manufacturing of Brainerd, Minn., strolled through this area last year. They loaded their boats.

The Lindy Rig and a night-crawler are made for this area's big bluegill, in addition to walleye, bass, northern pike, crappie, catfish and bullhead. If it's in the lake, the rig and crawler combination can find it.

So with the ambition of catching a pot full of tasty bluegill fillets, Frank Kelly, Bernie Pavelka and I headed to Branched Oak, an area lake full of good-sized bluegill and crappie.

The idea was to attack the old Malcolm road bed which runs across the south wing of the lake. On the dam side of the road bed is a smallish ditch which shows a two to three-foot gradual drop (from 15 to 18 feet of water) from the old road itself.

On the other side of the road is the old grader ditch which drops to 20-25 feet. That's too deep. The bluegills, and most of the other species found along the road bed prefer the shallower ditch.

Frank and Bernie, both composing room foremen for the Journal-Star Printing Co., were relatively new to the Lindy method of fishing. It amounts to "rigging" your line with a half-ounce walking sinker, a swivel, and a leader about 18-inches long with a short-shanked hook on the end.

Then grab a juicy crawler. On the crawler, you'll find two bands. Slip the hook through the first of the two bands. In the second band, take a worm blower and squirt a puff of air into the crawler to make it float off the bottom.

Now you're ready. Start backtrolling into the wind. Yep, backwards. The reason is the slower you troll the better off you are for control in keeping your boat over the shallow ditch and keeping your bait in the area of fish temptation longer.

Make sure the sinker drags bottom. The bait, with its puff of air, floats about a foot above the bottom where most fish will be able to see it best.

Backtroll slowly. When you feel a very solid tap, let your line out. Yep, out. Give the fish a chance to chew on that crawler until it's good and ready to swallow it. Count to 30 slowly if you need a guideline. And that maybe be too soon.

Then gently reel in the excess slack line. Lift the rod tip more gently to see if the fish is still there. If it is, point your tip right at the fish, reel in the slack line and set the hook with the gusto of taking your hand off a hot stove.

want the fish to know you're there.

Trolling the deeper open water for bluegill anywhere on the Salt Valley lake system has never let me down. Some of the key factors to keep in mind are bottom structure.

For example, the old road beds at Branched Oak are sure hits. Pawnee is productive on the east side of the old creek channel and along the dam facing. Conestoga is like Pawnee. Statecoach can do you the same.

Since the best bluegill fishing in these lakes — for the bigger bluegill (running three-quarters to one-pound plus) — is in the open water a locator is imperative, otherwise you're playing a low percentage game. An added bonus might be an occasional walleye, northern or bass. Pawnee is also great for catfish from two to seven pounds.

Backtroll into the wind and let the wind drift the boat back across the same area for double coverage on the prime areas. Once a concentration is found, work it hard. The effort will be worth it.

Another tip: it is beneficial to use a rod with a light action tip for better feel of tapping fish. A little practice can make one aware of the dead tap of the bottom or the sharp tap of fish.

Cannon Captures Midget Car Race

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Steve Cannon said all night long that he would "blow the doors off every other car on the track" during the USAC midget car extravaganza promoted by Jan Opperman at Midwest Speedway Wednesday night, and he did.

Cannon took the lead in the 40-lap main event on the sixth lap and held a length and one half advantage to win the race.

Cannon, of Danville, Ill. set the third fastest time during the qualifying, behind Bob Olivera and Tom Astone, in Volkswagen powered cars.

Cannon, driving the popular SESCO powered midget, battled with Rich Vogler for the initial six laps, but Vogler spun going into the second turn and dropped to fourth place in the restart.

"I figured that my main competition would come from those two Volkswagen-powered cars (Olivera and Astone). They have about a 200-pound advantage over me in that they weigh that much less. They don't have as much trouble through the turns as I might have."

Roger Branson, of Springfield, Ill., driving a Pinto powered midget racer, finished second in the feature as he found the pace of Cannon too tough to seriously challenge.

Third place was not so easily decided, however, as three-time midget car champion Mel Kenyon battled with Rich Vogler and Bob Astone.

Astone took the third place honor but only by a nose as he crossed the finish line just ahead of Kenyon and Vogler.

Cannon also captured the third heat while Olivera won the second and Astone the first. Bob Lithgow of Streator Ill., won the special fourth heat, while Gary Irvin captured the 8-lap sub-feature.

Olivera also won the trophy dash nosing out Mark Alderson to take the checkered flag.

"I like a banked track and especially this one," said Cannon referring to Midwest Speedway. "The track was very competitive tonight," said promoter Opperman, who had arranged the race for his charity, USCRY, United States Concerned Racers for Youth.

Fillies Vie For Honors In Tassel

Thirty seven fillies, nearly twice last year's figure, have been nominated for the Tassel Stakes, the first stakes race of the Lincoln Fairgrounds meet.

The four-furlong event will be run July 19, with a $3,000 added purse.

Among top nominees are William and Glen Fudge's Jam Session, a third place finisher in an Ak-Sar-Ben stake race, and the James Moss owned and trained Arrowhead Princess, which won its first race at Fommer Park.

Former NU AD To Refire

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — J. W. "Bill" Orwig, who as athletic director at Indiana University since 1961 has seen the Hoosiers win 32 Big Ten championships in seven sports, will retire next June 30.

Orwig's planned retirement was announced Wednesday by IU President John W. Ryan.

Orwig, 67, will retain his academic title as professor of physical education and will join Ryan's staff to assist in student athletic activities for all IU campuses.

In his retirement request to Ryan, Orwig indicated he wanted to give the university sufficient time to interview candidates and select a successor.

Orwig also has served on various committees of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, twice on the influential Football Rules Committee, and currently is a member of the powerful 15-man NCAA Council.

He was one of the founders of the National Association of College Directors of Athletics and was president of the organization in 1969-70.

Orwig was born in Cleveland, Ohio, and attended the University of Michigan, where he played football and was All-Big ten guard in basketball.

He later coached basketball and football in Benton Harbor, Mich., and Toledo, Ohio, before returning to the University of Michigan in 1948 as assistant football coach.

He served as athletic director at the University of Nebraska from 1948 to 1961.

Ribot Bandit Captures Ak-Sar-Ben's 24th Juvenile Stakes

Omaha — Ray Pope's Ribot Bandit scored an easy win here Wednesday at Ak-Sar-Ben to capture the 24th running of the Juvenile Stakes.

Ridden by John Kunitake, the 2-year-old gelding broke first then faded slightly before coming on strongly again in the stretch run of the 5 1/2-furlong chase. He won by 4 1/2-lengths over 6 Bar S's Jane of Embros, who turned back Diamond Stables, Ltd.'s High Estimate for second by one-half length.

The win, worth $14,850 of the total purse of $27,000, boosted Ribot Bandit's earnings to $20,123 on two victories and one second in three runs. He paid $5.00, $3.60 and $3.00 as the 3-2 favorite of the crowd of 13,484.

Jane of Embros, a Denver invader ridden by Nels Petersen, earned $5,130 and paid $5.00 and $3.00. High Estimate, steered by Gary DeJong showed for $4.20.

Jockey Leroy Moyers won three consecutive races, scoring with L. B. Anderson's Point Tie ($40.00) in the second, the Shinnone Farm's Queen's Minister ($2.60) in the third and Ken Opstein's Remuda ($3.40) in the fourth.

Heating System Question Unresolved

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

A decision on how the County City Building will be heated after the phasing out of steam heat in 1978 is still in limbo following a meeting of city and county officials Wednesday.

The officials took no action on a report from the building's architect outlining cost estimates for the installation of a new heating system since the Building Task Force has not made recommendations on the heating system.

Councilman Steve Cook, chairman of the County-City Building

Committee, was irate that the decision had to be delayed another month.

County Board Chairman Bob Colin complained that the architect's report had not been sent to the task force.

Architect Charles Thompson estimated it would cost $189,183 to install electric boilers in the building, while a gas-oil fired heating plant would cost $205,517.

A $225,000 item has been plugged into the building's budget for 1974-75 to cover cost of grape deliveries.

of a new heating system, whatever it might be.

Without a more definite answer on the heating dilemma, council members and county commissioners approved a $903,736 operating budget for the building.

Also included in the budget are funds to build and operate an information bureau to be located in the main lobby of the building.

Personnel Director Walt Mitchell presented a completed inventory of all city and county offices and their functions, which will be used to help out citizens.

The officials also agreed to look into the hiring of a telephone answering service to record citizen complaints and messages during the hours the offices are closed.

In other budgetary matters, city lawmakers acquiesced to the commissioners' proposal that funds for a full time deputy Civil Defense Director be deleted from the Civil Defense department's budget.

Denney questioned whether the department was needed since a main function of the office is the maintenance of fallout shelters for use in a nuclear attack. Denney said and Boosalis questioned the need for and reliability of such shelters.

The officials also appointed a three-member committee to investigate the operations of the department.

Sprinkle Helps City Utilities; Less Water, Electricity Used

A trace of rain did more than a trace of good for Lincoln utilities, company spokesmen said Wednesday.

The .01 inch of rain Wednesday morning kept Lincoln temperatures in the 70s until noon.

City Public Utilities Director Lee Blocker said at noon the city was pumping water at a rate that would total about 40-45 million gallons a day.

Before the rain, the rate equaled that of about 64 million gallons a day, he said.

The noon figure is about half the 83 million gallons pumped Tuesday, he said. The city pumped a record 87 million gallons Monday.

Blocker said public response to pleas from him and Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf to conserve water has been very good.

"But restraint must continue," he said. "We won't be in good shape until we get about an inch of rain."

Schwartzkopf asked citizens Tuesday to water lawns only Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Electricity consumption in Lincoln Wednesday lessened considerably, too, Lincoln Electric System Public Information Coordinator Franks Grant said.

At 5 p.m. Wednesday, Lincoln had consumed 281,000 kilowatt hours of electricity, Grant said. That compares to 316,000 kw hours at 5 p.m. Tuesday, the day Lincoln set its fifth consumption record with 319,830 kw hours.

The high in Lincoln Wednesday was 96 degrees.

Human Services Proposal Roadblocked

The proposed Department of Human Services ran into a roadblock at the hands of city lawmakers Wednesday and the proposal may be buried for good at Monday's council meeting.

Four members of the council and the mayor told county commissioners they feel the department should be funded entirely by the county.

That suggestion by Councilmen Dick Baker, Steve Cook,

Max Denney and Bob Sikyta and Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf is an apparent change in opinion since the last questionnaire dealing with human services was compiled by Councilwoman Sue Bailey.

Commissioners Bob Colin, Jan Gauger and Kenneth Bourne and Councilwomen Bailey and Helen Boosalis favored a 50%-50% funding split.

Baker explained he felt the county should be primarily responsible for delivering human services since under state

Marsh Always Gets Last Word

Albuquerque, N.M. (UPI) — Nebraska Lt. Gov. Frank Marsh says he's the only delegate to the National Lieutenant Governor's Conference with constitutional power over his wife.

Marsh's wife, Shirley, is the only female member of the 49-member Unicameral that her husband presides over.

"I'm the only man in the United States who has the constitutional power to have the last word over my wife," said Marsh.

Ft. Robinson To Celebrate

Fort Robinson (UPI) — Week-long ceremonies marking the official observance of the 100th birthday of the founding of Fort Robinson will begin Sunday, July 14, on the grounds of the historic outpost.

Among the featured events scheduled are a western art show by professional artists, Indian dances, parades featuring costumes from the past, horse jumping demonstrations, guard dog tactics, a style show and a reunion of soldiers and civilians who formerly worked at the fort.

Maj. Gen. Francis Winner, adjutant general of Nebraska, will officially open the observance at a flag raising ceremony Sunday.

Miss Indian America will be honored at events Wednesday and Thursday.

Gov. J. James Exon will officiate at closing ceremonies at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 21, and will dedicate the fort's old polo field in the name of Eric L. "Bud" Parker, who was an employee at Fort Robinson for 25 years. Bud, who lives in Crawford, and his horse, Oliver, were well known throughout the area and jumped in competition with the U.S. Olympic team.

Additional observances are planned at the fort later this summer.

2 Newspaper Corporations Plan To Merge

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — An agreement in principle to merge their 35 newspapers into a single group was announced Wednesday by Knight Newspapers Inc. and Ridder Publications Inc.

The announcement said the two companies plan to divest themselves of their television and radio holdings and that the combined new company will be devoted to newspaper publishing.

Chairman and Chief Executive Lee Hills of Knight and President Bernard H. Ridder Jr. of Ridder made the joint announcement. Knight has 16 daily newspapers in seven states and Ridder owns or has a substantial interest in 19 dailies in 10 states.

The proposed merger is subject to approval by the boards of directors and shareholders of both newspaper companies. The Federal Communications Commission must approve the companies' plans for divesting themselves of their broadcasting properties.

Sinatra, Aussie Unions Both Do It Their Way

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Frank Sinatra and Australian trade unions both did it their way Wednesday night — the singer canceled his Australian tour after a skirmish with the press and the unions threatened to strand him here until he apologizes.

Sinatra flew into Sydney Wednesday night from Melbourne, where the altercation took place. He and his entourage could go no farther than the 600-mile flight because the Australian Transport Workers' Union refused to service his plane before it left Melbourne.

The transport unions said Wednesday that until Sinatra apologized for calling journalists "hookers" and "parasites," among other things, they would ban service to all private or commercial planes on which he might leave Australia. The union members refused aircraft.

There also were charges of manhandling of newsmen by Sinatra bodyguards.

Sinatra not only refused to apologize after the affair in Melbourne, but demanded that the press apologize to him for the treatment he received in his first Australian tour in 15 years.

"He will never get out of Australia," said Bob Hawke, president of the Australian Council of Trade Unions. He added that his group would cooperate with any union's request for help in the action against the singer.

Hawke was expected to contact Sinatra on Thursday to seek a settlement of the dispute and the singer's attorney, Milton A. Rudin, said he would hold a news conference Thursday in Sydney.

Jim North, New South Wales secretary of the Australian Journalists Association, said he would ask state unions to ban coverage of any Sinatra concerts unless an apology was forthcoming.

The national transport union threatened to seek an international union boycott of Sinatra and said it was considering approaching its United States counterparts to place a ban on the singer unless he apologizes to the Australian press.

Sinatra said at a Melbourne concert Tuesday night that women journalists were "hookers" and "broaders" and male newsmen were "parasites" who had never done an honest day's work in their lives.

One of Sinatra's aides said the 59-year-old singer was referring to all women journalists when he called them "hookers."

First to demand an apology were the Professional Musicians' Union and the Theatrical and Amusement Employes Association. The Hotel Employes Union refused to service Sinatra's party in any hotel in the country.

Australian television viewers saw Sinatra shove a TV reporter aside and swear at him following the singer's Tuesday concert.

Sinatra's bodyguards are alleged to have manhandled newsmen after the sellout show before 8,000 fans who paid as much as $26 a seat.

On stage, Sinatra said of the press: "We who have God-given talents say to hell with them."

His remarks provoked the anger of New South Wales Labor party chief Neville Wran who said: "Who the hell does he think he is?"

Wran said that Sinatra was being granted special airport customs privileges and was flouting Australian highway speed limits.

He said Sinatra's party was "making Australia seem like some silly, little backward country."

SeNHPC Approves Emergency Plan

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council (SeNHPC) board of directors at its annual meeting Wednesday night adopted an interim regional plan for emergency medical services in the 17-county area.

In coordinating emergency medical services (EMS) capabilities, the report observes that virtually every one of the 375,000 residents in the region should be considered part of an emergency medical manpower pool.

Increased training, prevention, and public knowledge about services available and how to use them are stressed in the plan.

Gene Spellman, administrator of Warren Memorial Hospital in Friend and chairman of the 25-member committee that drafted the report over the past year, said one priority will be to establish ongoing training for EMS professionals and volunteers and ambulance attendants.

The State Health Department should assume the responsibility for the latter, even if federal funds for it are reduced or cut off, according to the report. Legislation is urged to guarantee it.

The plan recommends that planning for hospital emergency rooms offer either comprehensive or specialty services, and that existing facilities be given priority in EMS expansion.

The board will work with state and federal health agencies to develop and review minimum standards for EMS comprehensive programs, and alternate sources of care for non-emergency services.

Another section authorizes SeNHPC to assist ambulances and rescue squads to form mutual aid agreements between adjacent units, also an effort to curb expenses and develop a uniform reporting format.

Questions about emergency medical communications were left unanswered. The board decided that development of such a network "is the responsibility of the state," however, that local alternative should be investigated.

Because "financing of EMS is done in a piecemeal fashion," the plan recommends joint purchasing of EMS equipment and systems, alternate financing modes, and lists of what is available in southeast Nebraska.

To promote efficient and responsive EMS systems, the plan urges local areas form EMS councils.

The board also adopted criteria and procedures for review and comment on applications for proposed health projects in southeast Nebraska. Sixteen months in the writing, the manual may be used by local planners as well as supplying the basis for SeNHPC assessments and recommendations to authorities (state and federal agencies, for example) that make final decisions on the applications.

The review and comment manual stresses local decision-making on health projects and allows input from health providers and consumers to supplement SeNHPC review and comment studies. It will be in effect through March, 1975, including a formal evaluation period.

The board approved in principle a memorandum to be made between SeNHPC and county boards to foster increased understanding of each's role and responsibilities in the 17-county region.

For counties signing the memorandum, SeNHPC agrees to provide planning and staff assistance for health needs and new or expanded services.

The memorandum also provides for setting up county health planning committees. Participating county boards will agree to pay proportionate funding to support comprehensive health planning organized and administered by SeNHPC.

Board members adopted a personnel report, which includes SeNHPC staff salary recommendations for fiscal 1975.

Health Planning Council Elects Officers

Art Blackman, president of Hydrozo Corp. in Lincoln, Wednesday night was elected president of the Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council (SeNHPC) board of directors, succeeding M.A. (Deb) Hartman of York.

Board members at their annual meeting also named Henry Reimer of Beatrice vice president and Sister Phyllis Hunhoff of Lincoln treasurer. SeNHPC Executive Director Bill Joern serves as corporate secretary.

Blackman, immediate past chairman of the Lancaster County Health Planning Council (LCHPC), has served as an SeNHPC board member for three years.

Reimer, administrator of the Menonite Deaconess Hospital and Home in Beatrice, has been a member of SeNHPC at the committee level and has overseen council personnel matters. Sister Phyllis, executive director of the Madonna Professional Care Center, has served as LCHPC regional long-term care committee chairman and has been an SeNHPC board member for a year.

Nominations to the board of directors were also approved. The designations G, C, and P indicate that the individuals represent government, consumers or health providers.

From Lancaster County, those elected include Max A. Denney (G), 1975 term; Blackman (C), 1976 term; Alyce Studnicka (C), Ken Pohlman (C), Jack Stiles (P), Jack O'Shea (P), Helen Adams (C), Brenda Christy (P), and Richard Marshall (P), all 1977 terms.

James DeFreece (P) was elected to a 1977 term from Otoe County, as was Don Zersen (C) from York County.

The new officers and board members were elected for fiscal 1975, their positions effective Wednesday night.

Bart Director Of St. Elizabeth Fiscal Services

Cathanne O. Bart has been named fiscal services director and management team member of St. Elizabeth Community Health Center, according to Executive Director Jack E. Stiles.

A Nyack, N.Y., native, Mrs. Bart moves from her position as hospital cost analysis director. She holds a masters degree in business administration with emphasis in finance from Stanford University, and earned her undergraduate degree in economics from Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.

As fiscal services director, Mrs. Bart succeeds L. Eugene Furry, who has accepted a position with the University of Texas System, Medical School System.

Mrs. Bart, a member of the Hospital Financial Management Association, joined the St. Elizabeth staff in 1971.

Taylor To Head Manor Advisors

The Lancaster Manor Advisory Board Wednesday elected Pat Taylor to chair the group for the coming year.

She succeeds Jerry Sellentin who is resigning from the board.

The board has recommended to county commissioners that Stuart Erickson, public relations director for St. Elizabeth Community Health Center, be appointed to fill the vacancy created by Sellentin's resignation.

2 Brothers Sentenced On Tax Evasion Counts

Omaha (UPI) — Two Alliance Brothers were sentenced in Federal District Court Wednesday to five years probation and fines of $5,000 each after pleading guilty to charges of tax evasion.

The government had charged Michael and Elias Essay, Jr. with attempting to evade their income taxes from the years 1967-70.

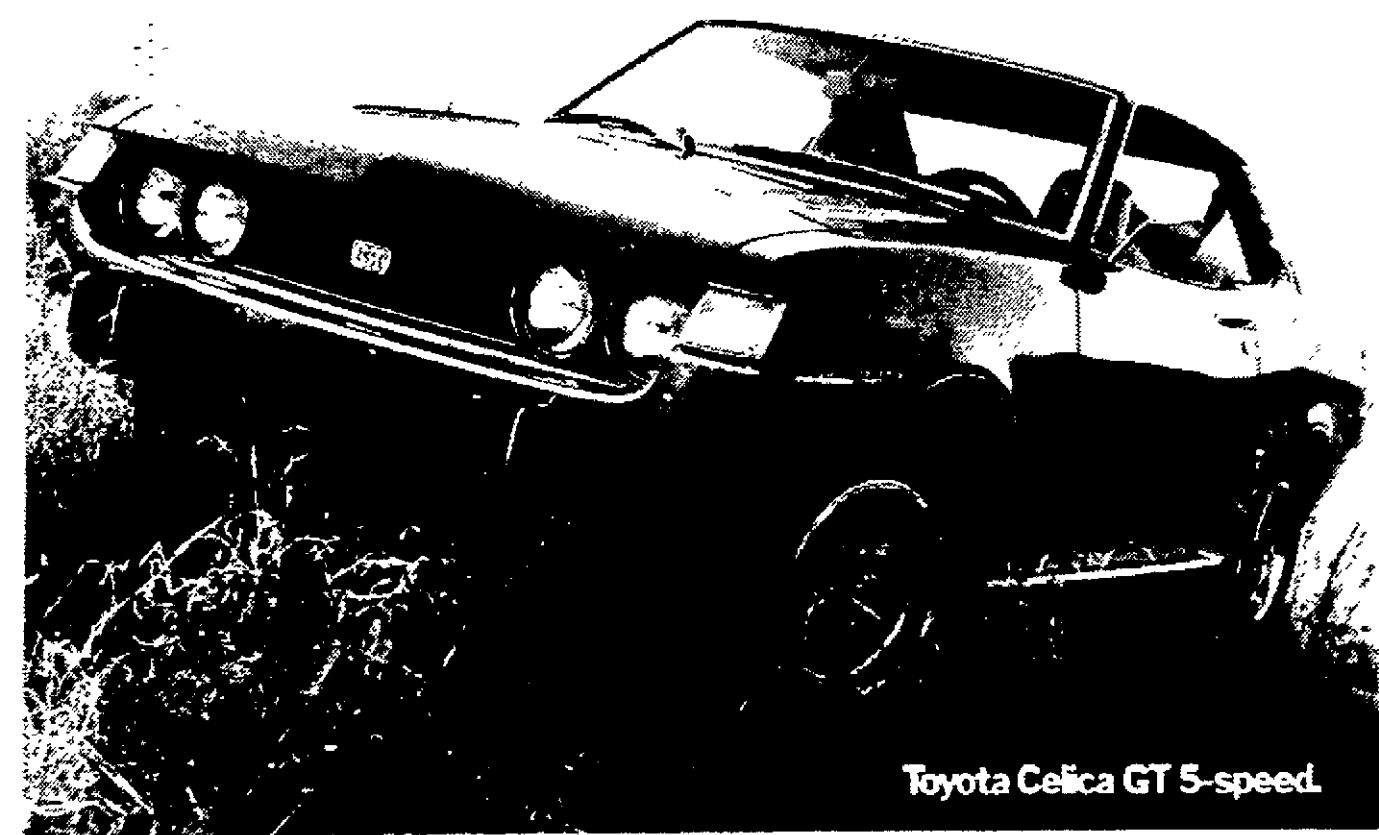

U.S. Atty. William K.

Schaphorst said that during the period, Michael Essay attempted to evade more than $7,200 in taxes, and his brother Elias attempted to evade nearly $8,000.

Charged against a third brother, Joseph, were dismissed. The government had alleged he attempted to evade some $7,600.

The Essay Brothers operate the Pepsi Cola Bottling Co. in Alliance.

Sex, power, prestige and 25 MPG.

Toyota Celica GT 5-speed.

25 MPG. Honest. That's what average people averaged driving Celica GT's on city streets, mountain roads and freeways in a 7,500 mile test conducted by an independent laboratory. What you get depends on how you drive, whether you carry rocks in the trunk and other variables.

Prestige. A standard feature. Along with (take a deep breath) an AM/FM radio, electric rear window defogger, reclining bucket seats, radial tires, power front disc brakes, 5-speed synchro-mesh transmission, tachometer, styled-steel wheels, full console, rally clock, tinted glass, loop pile carpeting and a specially-tuned MacPherson strut front suspension. All at no extra cost.

Power. 1968cc's worth from the Celica GT's overhead cam engine. Coupled with the 5-speed transmission, it's all you'll ever need. And that 5-speed box is more than sporty. It's economical.

Fifth gear is like overdrive. It makes cruising easy on gas and easy on the engine (it runs about 15% slower than in fourth).
